M. Moody as Teague.

Upon my soul I believe he's dead.

Act 4. Some F.

Publish'd by Harrison & C. April 1.1779.

Torre Coult

Printed fo

M. Moody as Teague.

Upon my soul I believe he's dead.

Act 4. Some F.

Publish'd by Harrison & C. April 1.1779.

Torre Coult

Printed fo

11770.03

COMMITTEE;

OR. THE

FAITHFUL IRISHMAN.

A

COMEDY.

As it is Acted at the

THEATRES-ROYAL

IN

Drury-Lane and Covent-Garden.

Written by Sir R. HOWARD.

LONDON:

Printed for HARRISON and Co. No 18, Paternoster-Row; and Sold, likewise, by J. WENMAN, Fleet-Street; and all other Booksellers.

M DCC LXXIX.

PROLOGUE.

To cheat the most judicious eyes, there he Ways in all trades, but this of poetry:
Your tradesman shows his ware by some false light,
To hide the faults and sightness from your sight:
Nay, though 'tis full of bracks, he'll boldy swear
'Tis excellent, and so help off his ware.
He'll rule your judgment by his considence,
Which in a poet you'd call impudence;
Nay, if the world afford the like again,
He swears he'll give it you for nothing, then.
Those are words too a poet dares not say;
Let it be good or had, you're sure to pay.
Wou'd 'twere a penn'worth; but in this you are Abler to judge, than he that made the ware.
However his design was well enough,
He try'd to show some newer-sassion of suff.
Not that the name Committee can be new,
That has been too well known to most of you:
But you may smile, for you have past your doom;
The poet dares not, his is still to come.

es not, bis is fill to come.

EPILOGO

BUT now the greatest thing is left to do,

More just Committee, to compound with you;

For, till your equal censures shall be known,

The poet's under sequestration:

He has no title to his small estate

Of wit, unless you please to set the rate.

Accept this half-year's purchase of his wit,

For in the compass of that time 'twas writ:

Not that this is enough: he'll pay you more,

If you yourselves believe him not too poor:

For 'tis your judgments give bim wealth: in this,

He's just as rich as you believe to is.

Wou'd all Committees cou'd have done like you,

Made men more rich, and by their payments too.

Enter Arb Coa

Mrs.

ter fo

truth, fortab

thou h

Coas

Mrs

to mal

ordina

how 1

mistre

by Rei

Mrs

Arbo Mrs you kn thing; whoeve hurt yo be as c

that n

Vourco

Ruth a fame A place;

I fay it

tis a n

Mrs.

nor my not her fon Abe

he is nances.
father a merly I now en prefent this; be chairman thous, I

Arbe

Dramatis Personæ.

ME N.

Colonel BLUNT.
Lieutenant STORY.
NEHEMIAH CATCH,
JOSEPH BLEMISH,
JONATHAN HEADSTRONG,
EZEKIEL SCRAPE,
Mr. DAY, the Chairman to the Committee.
ABEL, Son to Mr. Day.
OBADIAH, Clerk to the Committee.
Teague.
Tavern Boy.
Bailiff.
Soldier.
Two Chairmen.
Gaol-keeper.
A Servant to Mr. Day.

Colonel CARELESS.

WOMEN.

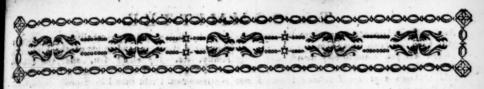

Mrs. RUTH. Mrs. DAY. Mrs. ARBBELA. Mrs. Chat.

A Stage Coachman.

Bookfeller.

Porter.

SCENE, LONDON.

H

$M \cdot M$

A C T

Enter Mrs. Day; brufbing ber beods and fearfs, Mrs. Arbella, Mrs. Ruth, Col. Blunt, and a Stage-Coachman.

Mrs. Day. NOW, out upon't, how dufty 'tis! All things confider'd, 'tis better to travel in the winter; especially for us of the better fort, that ride in coaches. And yet, to fay truth, warm weather is both pleasant and comfortable; 'tis a thousand pities that fair weather should do any hurt.-Well said, honest coachman, thou haft done thy part! My fon, Abel, paid for my place at Reading, did he not?

Coach. Yes, an't please you.

Mrs. D. Well, there's fomething extraordinary, to make thee drink.

you,

ts too.

nen.

Coach. By my whip, 'tis a groat of more than ordinary thinnels.-Plague on this new gentry, how liberal they are. [Afide.] Farewel, young me, it he mayor of Reading and his wife; farewel, gentlemen. Pray when you come of, and his wife; the mayor of Reading and his wife; farewel, gentlemen. Pray when you come of, and his wife; the mayor of Reading and his wife; and this Ruth that you fee there, in one of wife; and this Ruth that you fee there, in one of our laps—But now, where do you think the reft were?

[Add Why, what's the matter?

[Arbel. I am not very fad.

[A

thing; you are well enough; you need not fear, whoever does; fay I told you fo --- if you do not hurt yourfelf; for as cunning as he is, and let him be as cunning as he will, I can fee with half an eye that my fon Abel means to take care of you in your composition, and will needs have you his guest. Ruth and you shall be bedfellows. I warrant, that fame Abel many and many a time will with his fifter's lace; or elfe his father ne'er got him. Though I fay it that shou'd not fay it, yet I do fay it-'tis a notable fellow-

Arbel. I am fallen into ftrange hands, if they prove as bufy as her tongue-

Mrs. D. And now you talk of this same Abel, I tell you but one thing: I wonder that neither he tell you but one thing: I wonder that neither he Oba. I ask your honour's pardon; for I do pro-nor my husband's honour's chief clerk, Obadiah, is fels unto your ladyship, I had attended sooner, but anot here ready to attend me. I dare warrant my that his young honour, Mr. Abel, demuri'd me by fon Abel has been here two hours before us; 'tis the verieft Princox; he will ever be galloping, and yet he is not full one and twenty, for all his appearances. He never fole this trick of galloping; his father was just such another before him, and wou'd gallop with the best of 'em's he and Mrs. Bufie's husband, were counted the best horsemen in Reading, ay, and Berkshire to boot, I have rode for-merly behind Mr. Bufie, but in truth I cannot now endure to travel but in a coach; my own is at bette this; but I warrant you, if his honour, Mr. Day, sharman of the honourable committee of sequestrations, thou'd know that his wife rode in a flagecoach, he would make the house too hot for fome .- Why how is't with you, Sir? What [To the Colonei. weary of your journey?

Blunt. Her tongue will never tire. [Afide.]-So many, Mistress, riding in the coach, has a little distemper'd me with heat.

Mrs. D. So many, Sir! Why there were but fix-What would you fay if I should tell you, that I was one of the eleven that travell'd at one time in one coach?

Blunt. O, the devil! I have given her a new Afide.

Mrs. D. Why, I'll tell you-Can you gueis how Blunt. Not I, truly. But 'tis no matter; I do believe it.

Mrs. D. Look you, thus it was; there was, in the first place, myfelf, and my husband I shou'd have said first, but his honour wou'd have pardon'd me, if he had heard me: Mr. Busic that I told you guess-why-wou'd you think it! I had two grow-ing in my belly, Mrs. Buse one in hers, and Mrs. Mayoress of Reading a chopping boy, as it proved afterwards, in hers, as like the father as if it had been spit out of his mouth; and if he had come out of his mouth, he had come out of as honest a man's mouth as any in forty miles of the head of him: for, wou'd you think it? at the very fame time when this fame Ruth was fick, it being the first time the girl was ever coach'd, the good man, Mr. Mayor, I mean, that I spoke of, held his hat for the girl to ease her ftomach in.

Enter Abel, and Obadiah.

-Oh, are you come? Long look'd for come at laft. Did you not think it fit, that I shou'd have found attendance ready for me when I alighted?

his delays

Mrs. D. Well, fon Abel, you must be obey'd, and I partly, if not quite, guels your bufinels; providing for the entertainment of one I have in my eye. Read her, and take her: Ah, is t not for Abel. I have not been deficient in my care.

forfooth.

Mrs. D. Will you never leave your forfooths? Art thou not asham'd to let the clerk carry himsel better, and shew more breeding, than his master

Abel. If it please your honour, I have some business for your more private car.

Mrs. D. Very well.

Ruth. What a lamentable condition has that gen- tended religion and open rebellion ever painted, tieman been in ! faith I pity him.

would children that are froward; I wou'd not gentlewoman I told thee I kept civil, by desirin make them cry on purpose.

Arbel. Well, I like his humour, I dare fwear be's plain and honeft.

Ruth. Plain enough of all conscience; faith I'll

Abel. Nay, pr'ytheedon't; he'll think theerude. Rurb. Why then I'll think him an als. How is't after your journey, Sir?

Blunt. Why, I am worse after it.

Ruth. Do you love riding in a coach, Sir?

Blune. No, forfooth, nor talking after riding in Ruth. I fhou'd be loth to interrupt your meditations, Sir: we may have the fruits hereafter.

Blunt, If you have, they shall break loofe spite of my teeth,-This spawn is as bad as the great Pike

A-bel. Pr'ythee, peace !- Sir, we wish you all happiness

Blune. And quiet, good fweet ladies-I like her well enough.-Now wou'd not I have her fay any more, for fear the should jeer too, and spoil my good opinion. If, 'twere possible, I wou'd think well of one woman.

Mrs. D. Come, Mrs. Arbella, 'tis as I told ou, Abel har done it; fay no more. Take her by the hand, Abel. I profess, the may venture to take thee for better for worfe. Come, Mrs. the honourable committee will fit fuddenly. Come, let's along. Farewel, Sir. [Ex. all but Blunt.

Blunt. How! the committee ready to fit! Plague on their honours; for fo my honour'd lady, that was one of the eleven, was pleas'd to call 'em. had like to have come a day after the fair. 'Tis pretty, that fuch as I have been must compound for their having been rascals. Well, I must go feek a lodging, and a folicitor: I'll find the arrantest rogue I can, too ; for, according to the old faying, fet a thief to catch a thief.

Car. Thou fpeak'ft as if thou had'ft been at fea. Blunt. It's pretty well guels'd; I have been in a ftorm.

Car. What form, man ?

Blust. Why, a tempest, as high as ever blew from woman's breath. I have rode in a stage-coach, wedged in with half a dozen; one of them was a committee-man's wife; his name is Day; and the accordingly will be call'd, your honour and your ladyfip. There was her daughter too; but a bailard, without question: for the had no resem-blance to the rest of the notch'd rascals, and very pretty, and had wit enough to jeer a man in profperity to death .-- There was another gentlewoman, and the was handsome; nay, very hand-his blood is too thick for a trade. I will run for some: but I kept her from being as bad as the rest. thee forty miles; but I from to have a trade.

Car. Prythee, how, man?

Blust. Alas, poor simple fellow!

Blust. Why, she began with two or three good for. I pity him; nor can I endure to see and I defined her the would be accessed.

Car, Pr'ythee, how, man?
Blust. Why, she began with two or three go words, and I defired her the would be quiet while

Car. Thou wert not fo mad?

Blant. I had been mad if I had not—But Tea. Why, I say, you cou'd not do a better thing when we came to our journey's end, there met us Car. Thy mafter was my dear friend; and two such sormal and stately rakeals, that yet pre-thou with him when he was kill'd? Blunt. I had been mad if I had not-But Arbel. Are you so apt to pity men?

Arbel. Are you so apt to pity men?

Retb. Yes, men that are humourfome, as I clerk, rogues—and hereby hangs a tale.—The her to fay nothing, is a rich heires of one that died in the king's service, and left his estate under sequestration. This young chicken has this kite Inatch'd up, and defigns her for this her eldeft rafeal Car. What a duli fellow wert thou, not to make love and refcue her.

Blunt. I'll woo no woman.

Car. Would'it thou have them court thee? foldier, and not love a fiege !- How now, who art thou?

Enter Teague.

Tea. A poor Irifhman, Heav'n fave me, and fan all your three faces; give me a thirteen.

Car. I fee thou would'ft not lofe any thing for want of afking.

Tea. I can't afford it.

Car. Here, I am pretty near ; there's fixpence for thy confidence.

Tea. By my troth it is too little; give me another fixpence-halfpenny, and I'il drink your bealth, Car. How long haft thou been in England?

Tes. Ever fince I came here, and longer too, faith.

England? Tea. Serv'd Heaven, and St. Patrick, and m good fweet king, and my good fweet mafter ; yes, indeed. Car. And what doft thou do now?

Tes. Cry for them every day, upon my foul.

Car. Why, where's thy mafter? Tea. He's dead maftero, and left poor Teague

Upon my foul he never ferv'd poor Teague fo before in all his life.

Car. Who was thy mafter?

Tea. E'en the good Colonel Danger. Car. He was my dear and noble triend.

Tes. Yes, that he was, and poor Teague's too,

Car. What doft thou mean to do?

faying, fet a thief to care a thier.

Enter Col. Careles, and Lieutenant.

Car. Dear Blunt, well mere when came you, man?

Blunt. Dear Careles, I did not think to have met thee so suddenly. Lieutenant, your fervant. thee so suddenly. Lieutenant, your fervant. et and tells every body by one far, and tells every body by one far, and the suddenly. The suddenly was the suddenly to the suddenly was Tes. I will get a good mafter, if any good mafter he con'd not tell nothing for poor Teague,

Car. Why, man? Tea. Why, 'tis done by the ftars and the plas ters; and he told me there was no flars for life men. I told him there was as many ftars in litland as in England, and more too; and if a goo mafter cannot get me, I will run into Ircland, as fee if the ftars be not there flilt; and if they be, will come back, and beat his pate, if he will me then tell me fome good took, and fome ftars.

Car. Poor fellow! I pity Lim; I fancy he's fimply honeft .- Haft thou any trade?

Tea. Bo, bub bub bo! a trade, a trade! frifhman with a trade! an Irifhman fcorns a trade man miserable that can weep for my prince an friend. Well, Teagur, what say'st thou, if I will take thee rictuals, Car. C as thou d Tes. 7 Teague. Car. N night my ng to Blunt. lieutenan Lieu. a beifer Car. 1

Tea. X

how ove but the

ne upo

left me n

l though Lieu. luftrating venant t Tea. I will ta Car.

thou !

thou beg

Blunt.

Tea. Cor. Lieu. choak ' Can tage; t teach or Tea.

Lieu. hall loc luffriou Car. good fo Link

the' no

es; yo Car. doaths lome t togeth Tea little e Car.

Tea

fuch a wou'd help it M. haft be and m

Mr jou're turn.

of thi

how over him, and I ask'd over him why he died, thy good counsel for many a good thing; I had ne'er but the devil burn the word he said to me; and got Ruth, nor her estate, into my fingers else. faith I flaid kiffing his fweet face, till the rogues came upon me, and took all away from me, and left me nothing but this mantle; I have never any riduals, neither, but a little fnuff.

Cor. Come, thou falt live with me; love me ainted a ourable chiefel

-Thi defiring

ne that e under is kit

t rafcal

to make ice ? A w, who

and fam

ning fo

ence for me and bealths,

o, faith.

m'Aint

and my er ; yes,

foul.

Teague.

e fo be e's too.

d mafter

, by my

s at that he may-tar, and ave, but the plas-for Irith-

e in Ireif a goo

and, an hey be, I will not he's fimrade! at

s a trade; run fo ade.

fee and if I wil

er thing

d; wa

ars.

id?

as thou didft thy master.
Tot. That I will, if you will be good to poor

Car. Now, to our bufinefs; for I came but laft night myfelf; and the lieutenant and I were juft ng to feek a folicitor.

Blant. One may ferve us all; what fay you, frutenant, can you furnish us?

Lieu. Yes, I think I can help you to plough with a beifer of their own.

Car. Now I think on't, Blunt, why didft not thou begin with the committee-man's cow

Blunt. Plague on her, the lowbell'd me fo, that I thought of nothing, but flood firinking like a Lieu. But, hark you, gentlemen, there's an ilvenant to be taken.

Tea. Well, what is that covenant? By my fou I will take It for my new mafter.

Car. Thank thee, Teague-A covenant, fay'fl

Tea. Well, where is that covenant?

Cer. We'll not fwear, lieutenant. Line. You must have no land, then.

Blunt. Then, farewel acres, and may the dirt choak 'em.

Car. 'Tis but being reduc'd to Teague's equipage; 'twas a lucky thing to have a fellow that can teach one this cheap diet of fnuff,
Tea. Oh, you shall have your belly full of it.

Lieu. Come, gentlemen, we must lose no more time; I'll carry you to my poor house, where you fail lidge; for, know, I am married to a most illustrious person, that had a kindness for me.

Car. Pry thee, how didst thou light upon this good fortune?

Line. Why, you fee there are flars in England, the none in Ireland. Come, gentlemen, time calls us; you hall have my ftory hereafter.

[Ex. Blunt and Lieutenant.

Car. Come, Teague; however, I have a fuit of closths for thee; thou shalt lay by the blanket for fone time. It may be, thee and I may be reduced together to thy country fashioh.

Tes: Upon my foul, joy, I will carry thee to my

Tes. Upon my foul, little effate in Ireland.

Car. Hast thou got an estate?

Tra. By my foul, and I have; but the land is of such a nature, that if you had it for nothing, you wou'd searce make your money of it.

Car. Will, there's the worst on't; the best will help itself.

Exeum.

Enter Mr. Day, and Mrs. Day.

Mr. Day. Welcome, sweet duck; I profess thou has brought home good company, indeed; money and money's worth; if we can but now make sure of this heires, Mrs. Arbella, for our fon Abel.

Mrs. Day. If we can! you are user at your if; jou're asraid of your own shadow; I can tell you one if more, that is, if I did not bear you up, your heart wou'd be down in your breeches at every turn. Well, if I ware gone—there's another if for you.

Mr. Day. I profes thou fayeft tree; I thould

Tea. Yes, upon my foul, that I was; and I did not know what to do, indeed. I am beholden to

Mrs. Day. Nay, in that bufinefs, too, you were at your ifs. Now, you fee the goes currently for our own daughter: and this Arbella shall be our daughter too, or the shall have no estate.

Mr. Day. If we cou'd but do that, wife!

Mrs. Day. Yet again at your ifs.

Mr. Day. I have done, I have done; to your counfel, good cuck; you know I depend upon that, Mrs. Day. You may, well enough; you find the fweet on't; and, to fay truth, 'tis known too well, that you rely upon it. In truth they are ready to call me the committee-man; they well perceive the weight that lies upon me, hufband.

Mr. Day. Nay, good duck, no chiding now, but to your countel.

Mrs. Day. In the first place, (observe how I lay a defign in politicks) d'ye mark? counterfeit me a letter from the king, where he thatt effer you great matters, to ferve him and his interest under-hand. Very good; and in it let him remember his kind love and service to me. This will make them look about 'em, and think you somebody. Then promile them, if they'll be true friends to you, to live and die with them, and refuse all great offers; then, whilft'tis warm, get the composition of Arbella's estate into your own power, upon your defign of marrying her to Abel.

Mr. Day. Excellent,

Mrs. Day. Mark the luck on't too, their names found alike; Abel and Arbella, they are the fame to a trifle; it feemeth a providence.

Mr. Day. Thou observest right, duck; thou can't see as far into a mill-stone as another.

Mrs. Day. Pish 1 do not interrupt me.

Mr. Day. I do not, good duck, I do not.

Mrs. Day. You do not, and yet you do; you put me off from the concatenation of my discourse. Then, as I was faying, you may intimate to your honourable fellows, that one good turn deserves another. That language is understood amongst you, I take it, ha?

Mr. Day. Yes, yes, we use those items often.
Mrs. Day. Wall, interrupt me not.
Mr. Day. I do not, good wife.
Mrs. Day. You do not, and yet you do. By this means get her composition put wholly into your hands; and then, no Abel, no land-But, in the mean time, I would have Abel do his part, too.

Mr. Day. Ay, ay, there's a want; I found it.
Mrs. Day. Yes, when I told you so before.
Mr. Day. Why, that's true, duck, he is too backward; if I were in his place, and as young as I have been.

Mrs. Day. Oh, you'd do wonders! But, now I think on't, there may be fome use made of Ruth; tis a notable, witty harlotry.

Mr. Day. Aye, and fo fhe is, duck; Lalways thought fo.

Mrs. Day. You thought fo, when I told you I had thought on't first. Let me fee It shall be to; we'll fet her to instruct Abel, in the first place; and then to incline Arbella: they are hand and glove; and women can do much with one

Mr. Day. Thou haft hit upon my own thoughts. Mrs. Day. Pray, tall her in; you thought of that, too, did you not?

Mr. Day. I will, duck. Ruth! why, Rush! Enter Ruth.

Ruth. Your pleafure, Sit?

Mr. Day. Nay, 'cis my wife's defire, that and then, as the antwers, proceed: I know what Mrs. Day. Well, if it be your wife's, the can the'll fay, I am to used to her. best tell it herself, I soppose. D'ye hear, Ruth; Abel. This will do well, if I forget it not. you may do a bufiness that may not be the worse You know I wie but few words.

Rurb. What does the call a few! Mrs. Day. Look you, now, as I faid, to be fee me. fhort, and to the matter; my husband and I do defign this Mrs. Arbella for our fon Abel, and the well done, you're perfect. Then the will answer young fellow is not forward enough. You con-Sir, I suppose you are so buffed with flate affairs ceive? Pr'ythee give him a little instructions how that it may well hinder you from taking notice of to demean himself, and in what manner to speak, which we call address, to her. Then work on Arbella, on the other fide; work; I fay, my good girl; no more, but fo. You know my custom is to use but few words. Much may be said in a little; you fhan't repent it.

Mr. Day. And I fay fomething, too, Ruth.

Mrs. Day. What need you? Don't you fee it all Abel. Must I say so? I am afraid my mother will faidulteaux to your hand. What sayest thou, girl? be angry, for she takes all the state matters upon Ruth. I shall do my best-I would not lofe the Sport for more than I'll speak of.

Mrs. Day. Go, call Abel, good girl. [Exit Ruth.] By bringing this to pais, hufband, we first fecure ourselves, if the king should come; you'll be hanged elfe!

Mr. Day. Oh, good wife, let's fecure ourselves by all means. There's a wife saying: 'Tis good to have a shelter against every storm. I remember that.

Mry Day. You may well, when you have heard me fay it fo often.

Enter Ruth with Abel.

Mr. Day. O, fon Abel, d'ye hear-

Abel; I have formerly told you that Arbella would laughing. be a good wife for you: a word's enough to the wife; some endeavours must be used, and you must not be deficient. I have fpoken to your fifter Ruth, to fastruct you what to fay; and bow to carry yourfelf; observe her directions, as you'll answer the contrary; be confident, and put home. Ha, boy, hadft thou but thy mother's pate ! Well, 'eis but's folly to talk of that that cannot be! Be fure you follow your fifter's directions.

Mr. Day. Be fure, boy - Well faid, duck, I fay. [Excust or. and Mrs. Day. Ruth. Now, brother Abel.

Abel. Now, fifter Ruth.

Rueb. Hitherto he observes me punctually. [Afide. Have you a month's mind to this gentlewoman, Mrs. Arbella ?

Abel. I have not known her a week yet.

Ruth. O, cry your mercy, good brother Abel. Well, to begin then, you must alter your posture, and always hold up your head, as if it were bolfler'd him fay, he has told them for a certain, that Abel up with high matters; your hands join'd flat to fhall have a rich helres; and that must be you gether, projecting a little beyond the rest of your Arb. Must be?

Nust be?

Ruth. Yes, committee then can compel, me

Abel. Must I go apace, or fostly? Ruth. O, gravely, by all means, as if you were leaded with weighty confiderations. Suppose, now, that I were your mistress, Arbella, and met you by accident. Keep your posture. To and when you come just to me, flart like a horse that has spy d Something on one fide of him, and give a little gird

Ruth. Well, try once.

Abel. Pardon, Miftrels, my profound contem-[Afide. plations, in which I was to hid that you could no

Rath. Better fport than I expetted. [Afide.] Very well done, you're perfect. Then the will answer any thing below them.

Abel. No, forfooth, I have fome profound con-templations, but no flate-affairs.

Ruth. O, fie, man! you must confess that the weighty affairs of flate lie heavy upon you; but 'tis burden you must bear. And then shrug your Thoulders herfelf.

Ruibi Pifh! Did the not charge you to be ruled by me ? Why, man, Arbella will never have you, if the be not made believe you can do great matters with parliament-men and committee-men; how should she hope for any good by you else in her compofition?

Abel. I apprehend you now! I shall observe. Ruth. 'Tis well; at this time I'll fay no more put yourself in your posture-so-Now go look your miftrefs; I'll warrant you the town's our own.

Evit Abel. Abel. I go. Mrs. Day. Pray, hold your peace, and give every Ruth. Now I have fixed him, not to go off till body leave to tell their own tale. D'ye hear, fon he difcharges on his miftrefs. I could burk with Enter Arbella.

Arb. What doft thou laugh at, Ruth? Ruth. Didft thou meet my brother Abel? Arb. No.

Rurb. If thou hadft met him right, he had played at hard-head with thee.

Arb: What doft thou mean?

Rurb. Why, I have been teaching him to woo, by command of my superiors; and have instructed him to hold up his head so high, that of necessity he must run against every thing that comes in his way.

Arb. Who is he to woo? Ruth. Even thy own fweet felf.

Arb. Out upon him!

Ruth. Nay, thou wilt be rarely courted; I'll not Spoil the sport by telling thee any thing before-hand. They have fent to Lilly; and his learning being built upon knowing what most people would have

Ruth. Yes, committee-men can compel, more

Arb. I fear this too late. You are their daugh. ter, Ruth.

Ruth. I deny that. Rarb. Wonder not that I begin thus freely with

Arb. You amage me, out of the way, declaring that you did not fee het before, by reason of your deep contemplations. Then you must speak. Let's hear,

Abel. Save you, mistress.

Russ. O, sie, man! you shou'd begin thus: Pardon, Mistress, my profound contemplations, in which I was so buried that I did not see you.

Art. as love me tore Ruth At feetighly

affiftanc

Rith

ne refer your fri

-Obald compan fella ; y mittee | eumfpei fate, fi

> Ruth be perpi thee .: tim w time th flory. pound f

> tell'him one tha going to them al near to pate too

> Book . and eng marsh's lays del Tone ter they Book. or The noiles a

Tea. have of Book. Ten Book. Tea.

Book. Tea. now. Book. Tea. Drenan

Book. Tea. you afte Book. Tes.

you're ! tants el w wha ontemould not . Very anfwer affairs otice o hat the but 'tis ug your her will rs upon

nd con-

be ruled ve you matters ; how er com-

ve. Th more: o look ur own. it Abel. off till rfl with played

Arneted fity he is way.

-hand. d have t Abel ou.

daugh-

When I was

is rafte, and power ar they Thave.

I'll not being , more

y with no referve, and endeavour to be thought worthy of your friendship:

me to this their first-born puppy?

Add'IT was my ill fortune to fall into fuch hands, fourthly enticed by fair words and large promifes of affiftance.

Rith Peace!

Enter Obadiah.

Obad. Mrs. Ruth, my mafter is demanding your company, together, and not fingly, with Mrs. Arbella; you will find them in the parlour. The committee being ready to fit, calls upon my care and circomfpection to fet in order the weighty matters of fate, for their wife and honourable infpection.

Ruth. We come. - Come, dear Arbella, never be perplexed; chearful spirits are the best bladders bifwim with: if thon art fad, the weight will fink thee. Be feeret, and fill know me for no other thin what I feem to be, their daughter. Another time thou shalt know atl particulars of my strange covenant.

Arb. Come, wench, they cannot bring us to compound for our humours; they shall be free still?

Enter Teague.

Ta. T'FAITH, my fweet mafter has fent me to tell him so. He asked me, why he could not fend no errand but, How d'ye: and to such as I wou'd one that cou'd speak English. Upon my soul, I was have no answer from ugain.—Yet his simple honesty going to give him an Irish knock. The devil's in prevails with me, I cannot part with him. them all, they will not talk with me. I will go near to knock this man's pate, and that man Lilly's who's this? nte too that I will: I will teach them to prate to Enter Obadiah, and four Perfons more, with Papers. me. [One cries Books within.] Haw now, what noifes are that !-

days dend; Mercurius Britannicus, &c.

Tea. How's that? They cannot live in Ireland after they are dead three days!

Book Mercurius Britannicos, or the Weekly Post; trations?

Obad.

Tea. What is that you fay? Is it the covenant you

Bod. Yes; what then, Sir?

Book. Why, this is the covenant. Tes. Well, I must take that covenant. Bost. You take my commodities :

Tea. I must take that covenant, upon my foul,

Book. Stand off, Sir, or I'll fet you farther. Tes. Well, apon my foul now, I will take that brenant for my mafter.

Book. Your mafter must pay me for't then? Tea. I must take it first, and my master will pay you're paid, you thief o'the world. Here's coveamts enough to polion the whole nation. [Exit. | fleat by him.

Book. What a devil ails this fellow? [Crying.] He did not come to job me certainly, for he has not tu-Ard. I embrace it with as much clearnefs. Let ken above two penny worth of lamentable ware away! w love and affift one another .- Would they marry But I feel the rafeal's fingers. I may light upon my wild Irifhman again, and if I do, I will fix him with-PRatha No doubt, or keep your composition from fome catchpoles that shall be worse than his own compatry bogs. Enter Col. Carelefs, Col. Blunt, and Lieut. Story.

Lieu. And what fay you, noble colonels? How, and how d'ye like my lady? I gave her the title of Illustrious, from those illustrious commodities which the deals in, hot water and tobacco.

Gar. Pr'ythee, how cam'ft thou to think of marrying?

Lieu. Why, that which hinders other men prompted me to matrimony, hunger and cold, colonel,

Car. See where Teague comes. Goodness, how he smiles ! Why so merry, Teague?

Tea. I have done a thing for you indeed.

Car. What haft thou done, man? Tea. Guefs.

Car. I can't.

Tca. Why, then, guess again-I have taken the Car. How came you by it?

Tea. Very honeftly; I knocked a fellow down in the fireet, and took it from him.

Car. Was there ever fuch a fancy! Why, didn's thou think this was the way to take the covenant?

Teg. I am fore it is the fhortest, and the cheapeft way to take it.

Blunt. I am pleafed yet with the poor fellow's miftaken kindness; I dare warrant him honest, to the beft of his understanding.

FAITH, my sweet master has sent me to Car. This fellow, I prophesy, will bring me into a rascal; I have a great mind to go back and many troubles by his mistakes: I must send him of Lieu. Come, gentlemen, time calls-How now,

Car. I am a roque is I have not feen a picture in hangings walk as fafta.

Enter Bookseller.

Blunt. 'Slife, man, this is that good man of the committee family that I told thee of, the very elerk; and engagement of the bloody cavaliers! Mr. Sait- how the rogue's loaded with papers - Those are the march's farum to the nation, after having been three winding-fleets to many a poor gentleman's effate.

Twere a good deed to burn them all.

Car. Why, thou art not mad?—Well met, Sir; pray do not you belong to the committee of fequel-

Obad. I do belong to that honourable committee, who are now ready to fit for the bringing on the Blunt. Oh, plague! what work, raf-Car. Pr'ythee, be quiet, man-Are they to fit presently?

Obad. As foon as I can get ready; my prefence being material,

Car. What, wert thou mad? Wouldft thou have beaten the clerk, when thou wert going to com-

Blunt. The fight of any of the villaine fire me. Lieu. Come, colonels, there's no triffing, let's make haste, and prepare your business; see a not lose this firting. Come along, Teague. [Excent.]

Enter Arbella at one Door; Abel at another, as if to faw ber not, and flarts when he come to ber, as Ruth had taught him.

Arb. What's the meaning of this? I'll try to stead by him.

thing, but their prayers.

Abel. Now you should speak, forsooth.

Arb. What should I fay, Sir? Abel. What you please, forfooth.

Enter Ruth, as over-bearing them, and peeps.

Ruth. This is lucky.

Abel. No, forfooth, 'tis I that was not to fee you. Arb. Why, Sir, wou'd your mother be angry if you thou'd?

Abel. No, no, quite contrary-I'll tell you that reiently; but first I must fay, that the weighty affairs lie heavy upon my neck and shoulders. [Sbrugs. Arb. Wou'd he were tied neck and heels! This is a notable wench--look where the rafeal peeps too-if I hou'd beckon to her fhe'd take no notice; the is resolved not to relieve me. [Afide.

Abel. Something I can do, and that with fomebody; that is, with those that are somebodies.

Arb. Whift, whift. [Beckens to Ruth, and for bakes ber bead.]—Prythee, have some pity. Oh, unmerciful girl!

Abel. I know parliament-men, and fequestrators: I know committee-men, and committee-men know

Arb. You have great acquaintance, Sir?

Abel. Yes, they ask my opinion sometimes-

Abel. When the weather is not good, we hold a

Arb. And then it alters?

Abel. Affuredly.

Arb. In good time-No mercy, wench?

Abel. Our profound contemplations are caused by the confernation of our fpirits for the nation's good; we are in fabour,

Ard. And I want a deliverance-Hark ye, Ruth, take off your dog, or I'll turn bear indeed.
Rueb. I dare not; my mother will be angry.

Arb. Oh, hang you!

Abel. You shall perceive that I have some power, If you please to

A.b. Oh, I am pleased, Sir, that you shou'd have wer! I must look out my hoods and sears, Sir; tis almost time to go.

Abel. If it were not for the weighty matters of order. state which lie upon my shoulders, myself wou'd

Art. Oh, by no means, Sir; 'tis below your greatness-Some luck yet; the never came feafonably before.

Enter Mrs. Day. Arbella ; fo close indeed! Nay, then I smell Well, Mr. Abel, you have been fo us'd the been for the been follows and the been follows to be been follows to be been follows.—Nuth, thou art a good girl; I find have got ground.

Lorbore to come in, till I faw your ho-

Mrs. Doy and how has Abel behaved himfelf,

Rad. Oh, beyond expediation! He'll not need th teaching; you may turn him loofe.

Abel. Pardon, mistress, my profound contemplations, in which I was so hid that you could not something in thy way; a new gown, or so; it may be a better penny. Well faid, Abel, I say; I Arb. This is a fet form-they allow it in every did think thou wouldst come out with a piece of the [Afide. mother's at laft. - But I had forgot, the committee are near upon fitting. Ha, Mrs. you are craft; you have made your composition before-hand. Ah, this Abel's as bad as a whole committee: take that Arb. Why, truly, Sir, 'tis as you fay; I did not item from me. Come, make haste, cail the coach, Abel. Well said, Abel, I say.

A Table fer out-

but for né leav with th

will nee

that yo tenance

3, 3

Day. 23

. Obail Porte

Ester 1

Keep Mr.

able of endesv

fon br

Mrs

of dain

in your fay?

A 4

found

Arb

Rati

Mr

refun fettled fires y

her co

2 C tee ba

fideral

Me

2 0

is con

You I

the di

Bla

. Ar

fland for w be a d not te

36 mitte

how

ם מסנ

Ar

11

Ce

inceff

Dir

your ringe

the we

The Committee, and Obadiah ordening books and Obad. Shall I read your honours last order, and give you the account of what you last debated?

Mr. Day. I first crave your favours; to communicate an important matter to this honourable hoard, in which I shall discover unto you my own fincerity, and zeal to the good caufe.

I Com. Proceed, Sir.

Mr. Day. The business is contained in this letter: 'tis from no less a man than the king; and 'tis to me, as fimple as I fit here. Is it your pleafures that our cierk fould read it?

2 Com. Yes, pray give it him.
Obad. [Reads.] 46 Mr. Day, we have received good intelligence of your great worth and ability, especially in flate-matters; and therefore thought fit to offer you any preferment, or honour, that you shall defire, if you will become my intire friend. Pray remember my love and service to your discreet wife, and acquaint her with this; whose wifdom, I hear, is great. So recommending this to her and your wife confideration, I remain, Your friend, C. K."

2 Com. C. K!

Mr. Day. Ay, that's for the king. 2 Com. I suspect. [Afide.] Who brought you this letter?

Mr. Day. Oh, he upon't! my wife forgot that particular. [Afide.] Why, a fellow left it for me, and fhrunk away when he had done. I warrant you, he was arraid I should have laid hold on him. You, fee, brethren, what I rejed; but I doubt not but to receive my reward; and I have now a bufiness to offer, which in some measure may afford you an occasion.

a Com. This letter was counterfeited certainly.

Mr. Day. But firft be pleafed to read your laft

2 Come What does he mean? That concerns mt.

Ohad. The order is, that the composition arising out of Mr. Lafhley's effate be and hereby is invefted and allowed to the honourable Mr. Nathaniel Catch, for and in respect of his sufferings and good fervice.

Mr. Day. It is meet, very meet; we are bound in duty to firengthen ourselves against the day of trouble, when the common enemy hall endeagour to raife commotions in the land, and diffurb our new-built Zion. I defire this honourable board to understand that my wife being at Reading, and to come up in the flage-coach, is happened that one Mrs. Arbella, a rich heirest of one of the cavalier arty, came up alfo in the fame coach. Her father being newly dead, and her effate before being under fequestration, my wife, who has a notable pate of her own (you all know hez) prefently cast about to get her for my fon Abel; and accordingly invited her to my houle; where, though time w shall be r fo; it I fay; [ce of the mmittee e crafty; nd. Ah, ske that e coach, Abel. ooks and ler, and rted ? temmuourable my own

this letng; and tir pleareceived hought r, that intire to your ing this C. K."

ht you ot that for me, warrant n him. doubt how A affore ainly. Afide. our laft ås mt.

Afide ariting is inhaniel d good bound day of ruopes b our ard to and to at one valler being otable ly caft dingly ic Wat

ler fa-

bet hort, yet my fon Abel made ufe of it. Give ne leave to tell you my wife is without, together with the gentlewoman that is to compound. She with the gentlewoman that is to compound. She will needs have a finger in the pie. I hope, brethren, that came up in the coach with us—On my life, that you will please to cast the favour of your countries a sprightly gentleman with him. tenances unto Ab-1.

s, 3 Com. You wrong us to doubt it, brother Day. 1 Gall in the compounders.

had. Call in the compounders.

Porter. Come in, the compounders.

Ester Mrs. Day, Abel, Arbella, Ruth; and after the Colonels and Teague; they give the Door-

1 Com We are glad, Mrs. Day, that any ocea-fien brings you hither.

Mrs. Day. I thank your honours. I am defirous of doing good, which I know is always acceptable this, and our more lawful debts.

Mr. Day. Come on, fon Abel, what have you to

At I come unto your honours, full of profemd'contemplations for this gentlewoman.

Arbel. 'Slife, he's at's leffon, wench.

[Afide to Ruth. Ruth. Peace-Which whelp opens next? Oh,

the wolf is going to bark. Mrs. Day. May it please your honours, I shall esume to inform you, that my son Abel has fettled his affections on this gentiewoman, and defires your hondurs favour to be flewn unto him in her composition.

s Com. Say you fo, Mrs. Day? Why the commite have taken it into their ferious and pious confileration; together with Mr. Day's good fervice, in some knowledge that is not fit to communicate.

Mrs. Day. That was the letter I inventer. Afide. 2 Com. And the composition of this gentlewoman Is configned to Mr. Day; that is, I suppose, to Mr. Abel, and fo, confequently, to the gentlewoman. You may be thankful, miftress, for such good fortune; your estate's discharged; Mr. Day shall have the discharge.

Blust. Oh, damh the vultures ! Car. Peace, man. Afide.

Arb. I am willing to be thankful, when I underfind the benefit. I have no reason to compound for what's my own; but if I must, if a woman can be a definquent, I defire to know my public censure, not to be left in private hands.

i. Be contented, gentlewoman; the comnittee does this in favour of you. We understand how easily you can fatisfy Mr. Abel; you may, if you please, be Mrs. Day.

Rest. And then, good night to all. [Ande.

Arb. How, gentlemen! are you private marmage jobbers? D'ye make markets for one another?

2 Can. How's this, gentlewoman?

Pinn. A brave, noble creature!

[Afide.

Or. Thou art fmitten Blunt; that other female too, methinks, shoots fire this way.
Tee. Take care the don't burn your wig.

Mis. Day. I denie your honours to pardon her incesant words; persons the doth not imagine the tood that is intended her.

2 Com. Gentlewoman, the committee, for Mrs. Day's fake, passes by your expressions; you may be your own enemy, if you will.

Arb. My own enemy! Ruth. Pr'ythee, peace! 'tis to no purpole to wran-Afide.

2 Com. Come on, gentlemen ! What's your cafe ? To the Colonels.

[While they speak, the Colonels pull the papers out, and deliver em.

Car. Our bufiness is to compound for our eftates; of which here are the particulars, which will agree with your own furvey.

Tea. And here's the particulars of Teague's ef tate, forty cows, and the devil a bull among them.

Mr. Day. Come, duck, I have tood the honourile committee that you are one that will need by years purchase; the first payment down, the other at fix months end, and the devil a bull amongst them.

Mr. Day. Well, gentlemen, the rule is two years purchase; the first payment down, the other at fix months end, and the estate to figure is

Car. Can you afford it no cheaper?

z Com. 'Tis our rule.

Car. Very well; 'tis but felling the reft to pay

2 Com. But, gentlemen, before you are admit-ted, you are to take the covenant. You have not taken it yet, have you?

Car. No.

Tea. Upon my thoul, but he has now: I took it for him, and he has taken it from me. 2 Com. What fellow's that?

Car. A poor simple fellow, that ferres me. Peace, Teague.

Tes. Why, did not I knock the fellow down? 2 Com. Well, gentlemen, it remains, whether you'll take the covenant?

Tea. Why, he has taken it.

Car. This is strange, and differe from your own principle, to impose on other men's consciences.

Mr. Day. Pift! we are not here to dispute; we act according to our inftructions, and we cannot admit any to compound without taking it; therefore your answer,

Tea. Was it for nothing I took the-

Car. Hold your tongue. No, we will not take it. Much good may it do them that have swallows large enough; 'twill work one day in their stomachs.

Blunt. The day may come, when those that suf-ier for their consciences and honour may be rewarded.

Mr. Day. Ay, ay, you make an idol of that ho-

Blunt. Our worthips, then, are different; you make that your idol which brings you interest, we can obey that which bids us lofe it.

Arb. Brave gentlemen! Ruth. I flare at them till my eyes ache. Afide.

2 Com. Gentlemen, you are men of dangerous pirits. Know, we must keep our rules and instructions, left we lofe what providence hath put inte our hands.

Car. Providence! fuch as thieves rob by.

2 Com. What's that, Sir ? Sir, you are to bald. Car. Why in good footh you may give lofest to fpeak; I hope your honours, out of your loo of compaffion, will partie us to talk over out. parting acres.

Mr. Day. It is well you are fo merry.

Car. O, ever whilft you live, clear fouls make light hearts: faith, would I might alk one quellies?

2 Com. Swear not then. Car. Thou shalt not covet thy neighbour's goods;

there's a Rowland for your Oliver.
Tea. There's an Oliver for your Rowland, take that till the pot boils ..

Car. My question Paly, which of all you is to have our effeces of will you make traitors of them, Tea. Well, I have not curs'd, how much had graw em, and quarter em?

Blunt. No, no, 'tis only to intreat the honourable persons that will be pleased to be our house-Leepers, to keep them in good reparations; we may take possession again, without the help of the colf, I am (bliged to drive it upin a corner to catch it. 2 Cem. You'll think better on't, and take this covenant

Car. We will be as rotten, first, as their hearts that invented it.

Ruth. 'Slife, Arbella, we'll have thefe two men; there are not two such again to be had for love nor

Mr. Day. Well, gentlemen, your follies light Car. Why then hoift fails for a new world-

Tea. Ay, for old Ireland. Car. D'ye hear, Blunt, what gentlewoman is that? Blunt. 'Tis their witty daughter I told thee of. Car. I'll go fpeak to 'em; I'd fain convert that pretty covenanter.

not to be troubled with the covenant.

Arb. If they do, I'll not take it.

Blunt, Brave lady! I must love her against my Car. For you, pretty one, I hope your portion will be enlarged by our misfortunes. Remember your benefactors.

Ruth. If I had all your estates, I could afford you as good a thing.

Car. Without taking the covenant?

Rusb. Yes, but I would invent another oath. Car. Upon your lips?

Ruth. Nay, I om not bound to discover.

Blunt. Prythce come! Is this a time to spend in fooling !

Car. Now have I forgot every thing. Blunt. Come, let's go.

2 Cem. Gentlemen, void the room. Car. Sure tis impossible that kite should get that pratty merlin,

Blunt. Come, pr'ythee let's go; these muckworms will have earth enough to stop their mouths'

Car. Pray use our estates husband-like; and fo, our most honourable bailiffs, farewel. [Exeunt.

Tea. Ay, bum-baily rafca's

Mr. Day. You are rude. Door-keeper, put 'em forth there.

Por. Come forth, ye there; this is not a place for fuch as you.

Tea. Devil burn me, but ye are a rascal, that

Por. And please your honours, this profane Irishman fwore an oath at the door, even new, when I appld have put him out.

Por. Here you must pay, or lie by the heels.

To. What must I pay by the heels? I will not pay by the heels. Master, ubbub boo!

Enter Carelefs.

for. What's the matter?
Tea. This gander-fac'd gag fays, I must pay by the heels

Car. What have you done?

Tea. Only forore a hit of an oath.

Car. Here's a failling, pay for't, and come along is the now? et a nor its to doing gine math, , the Laxie that been

0

Teag

with leave

Tel

ther r

Car

no no

traff

and y made fents

bulin

he m

Tea

you n

Tei

Car

Te

Car

nult fober

Tes

fpits,

head

Te

will !

ning

wher

Li

mift

Te myle

14

M

confi

fo m have ne'er er is hone

d

thou

for !

R

for a

Por. That had been but fix-pence.

Tea. Och, if I had but one fix-pence-half-penny in the world, but I would give it for a curse to eafe my stomach on you. My money is like a wild I have hold of it by the foulf of the neck. Here, Mister, there's the shilling for the oath. And there's the fixpence-haif-penny for you, for the curse, before-hand; and now, my curse and the curse of Cromwell, light upon you all, you thieves, [Knocks down the Porter, and exit. Mrs. Day. Has this honourable board any other commanus!

2 Com. Nothing farther, good Mrs. Day .- Gentlewoman, you have nothing to care for, but be grateful and kind to Mr. Abel.

Arbel. I defice to know what I must directly trust to, or I will complain.

Mrs. Day. The gentlewoman needeth no doubt, the shall suddenly perceive the good that is intended her, if the does not interpose in her own light.

Bluns. Nay, pr'ythee let's go. Mr. Day. I pray withdraw; the committee he Cor. Lady. I hope you'll have that good fortune, pass'd their order, and they must now be private. Mr. Day, I pray withdraw; the committee has Cem. Nay, pray, miftrefs, withdraw.

[Exeunt all but the Committee. Mr. Doy. I think there remaineth nothing farther, but to adjourn till Monday. And so peace remain with you. [Exeunt.

T III.

Enter Col. Careles, Col. Blunt, and Lieutenant Story.

Lieu. By my faith, a fad flory. I did apprehend this covenant would be the trap.

Car. Never did any rebels fish with such cormorants; no ftoppage about their throats: the rafeals are all fwallow.

Enter Teague. How now, Teague! what fays the learned-Tea. Well then, upon my floul, the man in the great cloak, with the long fleeves, is mad, that he is. Car. Mad, Teague!

Tea. Yes i'faith is he; he faid, I was fent to make game of him.

Car. Why, what didn thou fay to him? Tea. I asked him if he would take any counsel. 'Slife, he might well enough think thou him. Why, thou shouldest have asked him mock'ft him. when we might have come for counsel.

Tea. Well, that is all one, is it not? If we would take any counfel, or you would take any counfel, is not that all one then?

Car. Was there ever such a mistake?

Blunt. Pr'ythee peyer be troubled at this; we are past counsel. If we had but a friend amongst them, that could but flide us by this covenant.

Car. Nothing anger'd me fo, as that my old kitchen-stuff acquaintance turned her head another way, and feemed not to know me.

Blunt. How! kitchen-Auff acquaintance? Car. Mrs. Day, that commanded the party in the stage-coach, was my father's kitchen-maid, and in days of yore was called Gillian.

Lieu. Hark ye, Colonel; what if you did vist this translated kitchen-maid?

Tea. Well, how is that? a kitchen-maid! where Blynt. The Lieutenant advices well.

uch had alf-pencurle to catch it. Here. . And for the and the thieves, and exit. y other -Genbut be tly truft doubt, ntended nt.

tee has vate. mittee. ng fareace re-Exeunt.

tenant rehend

ormorafcals in the

he is. ent to nfel.

thou d him If we e any ve are nongft y old other ty in maid, d vifit

where 1

with her, and defire to know when I may have the covenant the right way. leave to wait on her.

Blant. We shall have Teague mistake again. Tea. I will not mistake the kitchen-maid. Whither must I go now, to mistake that kitchen-maid? Car. But do you hear, Teague? you must take no notice of that, upon thy life; but, on the con- ners without? Go out, and fetch 'em in. trary, at every word you mult fay, your ladyship, and your honour. As for example, when you have made a leg, you must begin thus: My master prefents his service to your ladyship, and having some thought I shou'd speak to the like of you. hunners with your honour, defires to know when he may have leave to wait upon your ladyship.

[Teague turns bis back on the Col.] Blockhead, faucy, with my hammer. you must not turn your back.

Tea. Oh, no, Sir, I always turn my face to a lady-But was the your father's kitchen-maid?

Car. Why, what then?

Tea. Upon my fhoul, I shall laugh upon her face, for all I would not have a mind to do it.

Cer. Not for a hundred pounds, Teague; you must be fure to fet your countenance, and look very foberly, before you begin.

Tea. If I should think then of any kettles, or fpits, or any thing that will put a mind into my head of a kitchen, I should laugh then, should I not? Car. Not for a thousand pounds, Teague; thou mayeft undo us all. s. Well, I will hope I will not laugh then : ! will keep my mouth if I can, that I will, from running to one fide, and t'other fide. Well now, where does this Mrs. Tay live.

Lieu. Come, Teague, I'll walk along with thee, and thew thee the house, that thou mayeft not mistake that, however.

Tes. Shew me the door, and I'll find the house

Car. Pr'ythee do, Lieutenant.

Tes. O, Sir, what is Mrs. Tay's name?

Exeunt.

Enter Mrs. Day, Arbella, Ruth, and Abel. Mrs. Day. Well, Mrs. Arbella, I hope you have confider'd enough by this time; you need not use fo much confideration for your own good; you may have your effate, and you may have Abel, and you may be worfe offer'd-Abel, tell her your mind; ne'er ftand, fhilly, fally-Ruth, does fhe incline, er it the wilful?

Ruth. I was just about the point, when your onour interrupted us. One word in your Ladyhip's ear.

Abel. You fee, forfooth, that I am formebody, though you make nobody of me; you fee I can pretail; therefore, pray, fay what I shall trust to; for I must not faund shilly, shally.

Arb. You are hafty, Sir. Abel. I am called upon by important affairs; end therefore I maft be bold, in a fair way, to tell you, that it lies upon my fpirit exceedingly.

Arb. Saffron poffet-drink is very good against the beaviness of the forit.

Med. Nay, forfooth, you do not understand my

Arb. You do, I hope, Sir; and 'tr's no matter, Sir, if one of us know it.

Enter Teague.

Tes. Well, now, who are all you? Arb. What's here, an Irish elder come to examine us all?

The Well, now, what is your names, every one?

Co. Nay, flay; in the first place, I'll fend | Ruth. Arbella, this is a ferrant to one of the Tesque to her, to tell her I have a little buineis colonels; upon my life, 'tis the Irifaman that took Arb, Peace, what should it mean? Tea. Well, cannot some of you all say nothing, without fpeaking?

M.s. Day. Why, how now, faucebox! what wou'd you have? What, have you left your man-

Tea. What should I fetch now?

Mrs. Day. D'you know who you speak to, firrah? Tea. Yes, I do; and it is little my own mother

Abel. You must not be faucy to her honour. Tea. Well, I will knock you down, if you be Ruth. This is miraculous!

Tea. Is there none of you that I must speak to now ?

Arb. Now, wench, if he should be fent to us!

Tea. Well; I wou'd have one Mrs. Tay fpeak unto me?

Mrs. Day. Well, firrah, I am the; what's your bufiness !

Tea. O, are you there, with yourfelf, Mrs. Tay-Well, I will look well first, and I will fee my face, and tell her my message. [Afide.] My master, the good Colonel Careless, bid me ask thy good ladyship-Upon my foul, now, the laugh will come upon my mouth, in fpite of me.

[He laughs always when he fays ladyship or bonour. Mrs. Day. Sirrah, firrah! What, were you fent to abuse me?

Ruth. As fure as can be. Tea. I do not abuse thy good honour—I cannot help my laugh now. I will try again, now; I will not think of a kitchen, nor a dripping-pan, nor a mustard-por-My master would know of your ladyfhip.

Mrs. Day. Did your mafter fend you to abufe me, you rascal? By my honour, firrah-

Tea. Why do you abuse yourself, now, joy?

Mrs. Day. How, sirrah! Do 1 mock myself?

This is some Irish traitor.

Tea. I am no traitor, that I am not; I am an frish rebel. You are cozen'd now.

Mrs. Day. Sirrah, firrah, I will make you know who I am-An impudent Irish rascal!

Abel. He feemeth a dangerous fellow, and of a bold, seditious spirit.

Mrs. Day. You are a bloody rafcal, I warrant ye. Tea. You are a foolish, brabble-bribble woman, that you are.

Abel. Sirrah, we that are at the head of affairs must punish your fauciness.

Tea. And we that are at the tail of affairs will punish your fauciness.

Mrs. Day. Ye rascally variet, get out of my doors, Tea. Will not I give you my message, then?

Mrs. Day. Get you out, rascal. Tea. I pr'ythee let me tell my message.

Mrs. Day. Get you out, I fay. Tea. The devil burn your ladyship, and honour-hip, and kitchenship.

Mrs. Day. How the villain has distemper a mel
Out upon't too, that I have let the raical go unpunish'd. And you [To Abel.] can stand by, like a sheep; run after him, then, and stop him. I'M have him laid by the heels, and make him confess who fent him to abuse me. Call help, as you go.
Make haste, I say. [Exit Abel.

Ruth. 'Slid, Arbella, Tup after him, and fave

the poor fellow for heaven's fake; ftop Abel, by any | Car. Oh, good Teague, no time for meffages, means, that he may 'scape.

Arb. Keep his dam off, and let me alone with Rath. Fear not. [Exit.

Mrs. Day. 'Uds my life, the rafeal has heated one !- Now I think on't, I'll go myfelf, and fee it done -- A faucy villain!

Ruth. But I muft needs acquaint your honour with one thing first, concerning Mrs. Arbella.

Mrs. Day. As foon as ever I have done. Is't good news, wench?

Ruth. Most excellent ! If you go out you may spoil all. Such a discovery I have made, that you will blefs the accident that angered you.

Mrs. Day. Quickly then, girl. Rutb. When you fent Abel after the Irishman, Mrs. Arbella's colour came and went in her face; and at last, not able to stay, the flunk away after him, for fear the Irishman should hurt him; the Mrs. Day. I protest he may be hurt, indeed.

I'll run, myfelf, too.
Ruib. By no means, forfooth. If you do not find the has stopped him, let me ever have your hatred

Prav, credit me.

Mrs. Day. Come, good wench; I'll go in, and hear ail at large. It shall be the best tale thou hast told thefe two days. Come, come, I long to hear all. Abel, for his part, needs no help by this time. Come, good weach.

[Exeunt. Enter Col. Blunt, attaken by Bailiffs.

Blunt. At whose fuit, rafcals?

I Bail. You shall know that time enough.

Blust. Time enough, dogs! Must I wait your Bail. Oh, you are a dangerous man! 'Tis fuch traitors as you that disturb the peace of the nation.

Blunt. Take that rascal. [Kicking bim.] If 1 had any thing at liberty, befides my foot, I would beftow it on you.

I Bail. You shall pay dearly for this kick, before you are let loofe, and give good special bail. Mark that, my furly companion; we have you fast.

Blunt. 'Tis well, rogues, you caught me conveniently; had I been aware, I should have made fome of your feurvy fouls my fpecial bail.

Enter Col. Careles. Car. How is this! Blunt in hold! You catch-pole, let go your prey, or [Car. draws, and Blunt, in the fcuffe, throws up one of their beels, gets a fword, and belps to drive them off.

Blunt. Paith, Careles, this was worth thanks. I was fairly going.

Car. What was the matter, man?

Blunt. Why, an action or two for free quarter, now made trover and convertion. Nay, I believe we shall be fued with an action of trefpais, for every field we have marched over; and be indicted for riots, for going at unfeafonable hours above two in a company.

· Enter Teague, running.

Car. Well, come, let's away.

Tea. Now, upon my fhoul, run as I do; the pray come in. men in red coats are running too, and they cry, murder, murder! I never heard fuch a noise in Ireland in all my life.

Car. 'Slife, we muft thift feveral ways, Farewe'. If we 'scape, we meet at night; I shall take heed

Teo, Shall I tell Mrs. Tay's mellage.

A noife within. Enter Bailiffs and Soldiers.

Mrs. E

For augh

and 'twe

head-qui that fbal

but give be fo ho

Mrs.

Car.

ments :

quainte Mrs ..

with ca

Lord, I

difguife

1 know

day's c

Car.

or wit

amberg

Mrs

remem

mon ab

footma

Why :

that fi

and w in aut

alarm Mr

M

Car

Ca

fent

orde Ca

mad

R

vent

and bat hit

ple

Mr

Car.

Car.

u thi

Car.

Car. S

1 Bail. This way, this way! Oh, villains! My neighbour Swash, is hurt dangerously. Come, good foldiers, tollow, follow.

Enter Carelefs and Teague again. Car. I am quite out of breath, and the bloodhounds are in a foll cry upon a burning fcent: plague on 'em, what a noise the kennels make! What door's this, that graciously stands a little open? What an ass am I to ask? Teague, scout abroad; if any thing happens extraordinary, ob-ferve this door, there you shall find me. Now, by your favour, landlord, as unknown. Exeunt Severally.

Enter Mrs. Day, and Obadiah.

Mrs. Day. It was well observed, Obadiah, to bring the parties to me firft. 'Tis your mafter's will that I shou'd, as I may say, prepare matters for him. In truth, in truth, I have too great a burden upon me; yet, for the public good, I am content to undergo it.

Obad. I fall, with fincere care, prefent unte your honour, from time to time, 'fuch negotiations as I may discreetly presume may be material for your honour's inspection.

Mes. Day. It will become you fo to do. You have the prefent that came laft?

Obad. Yes, and please your honour, the gentlewoman, concerning her brother's releafe, hath allo fent in a piece of plate.

Mrs. Day. It's very well.

Obad. But the man without, about a bargain of the king's land, is come empty.

Mrs. Day. Bid him be gone; I'll not speak with He does not understand himfelf.

Obad. I fhall intimate fo much to him.

[As Obadiah goes out Col. Careless meets bim, and tumbles bim back.

Mrs. Day. Why, how now? What sude com-panion's this? What wou'd you have? What's your oufiness? What's the matter? Who fent you? Who do you belong to? Who-

Hold, hold, if you mean to be answer'd to all thefe interrogatories. You fee I resolve to be your companion. I am a man; there's no great matter; nobody fent me; nor I belong to nobody. I think I have answer'd to the chief heads.

Mrs. Day. Thou haft committed murder, for aught I know. How is't Obadiah?

Car. Ha! What luck have I, to fall into the territories of my old kitchen acquaintance. I'll proceed upon the ftrength of Teague's meffage, tho' I had no answer.

Obad. Truly he came foreibly upon me, and I fear has bruifed fome intellectuals within my flomach.

Mrs. Day. Go in, and take some Irish flat, by way of prevention, and keep yourfelfwarm. [Ex. Obad.] Now, Sir, have you any bufiness, that you came in to rudely, as if you did not know who you came to? How came you in, Sir Royfter? Was not the porter at the gate?

Car. No, truly; the gate kept itself, and stood gaping, as if it had a mind to speak; and say, I

Mrs. Day. Did it fo, Sir ? And what have you to fay?

Car. Ay, there's the point. - Either fhe does not, or will not know me. What shou'd I fay? How dull am Il Pox on't, this wit is like a common friend, when one has need of him, he won't come near offe, 10000 to 100000 to 1000000 to 100000 to 100

Mrs. Day Sir, are you fludying for an invention? For aught I know, you have done fome mischief, and 'twere fit to fecure you.

Car. So, that's well; 'twas pretty to fall into the head-quarters of the enemy. Mrs. Day. Nay, 'tis e'en fo; I'll fetch thofe that fall examine you.

Car. Stay, thou mighty flate's-woman; I did but give you time to fee if your memory would but he fo honeft, as to tell you who I am.

Mrs. Day. What do you mean, fauce-box? Car. There's a word yet of thy former employ-ments: that fauce. You and I have been ac-

Mrs. Day. I do not use to have acquaintance with cavaliers.

Car. Nor I with committee-men's utenfils; Lord, Lord, you are horridly forgetful. What, you think I should not know you, because you are diffruited with curled hair, and white gloves? Alas! I know you as well as if you were in your fabbathday's cinnamon waiftcoat.

Mrs. Day. How, firrah!

Cor. And with your fair hands bath'd in lather; with your fragrant breath driving the fleeting ambergreafe off from the waving kitchen-ftuff.

Mrs. Day. Oh, you are an impudent cavalier! I emember you now, indeed; but I'll-Car. Nay, but hark you, the now honourable, Car offance past conditions; did I not fend my Rus footman, an Irishman, with a civil message to you? Why all this ftrangeness, then?

Mrs. Day. How, how, how's this! Was't you that fent that raigal to abuse me, was't fo?

Car. How now! What, matters grow worse, and worfe!

Mrs. Day. I'll teach you to abuse those that are authority. Within there! who's within?

in authority. Car. 'Slife, I'll ftop your mouth, if you raile an alarm. [She cries out, he fleps her mouth. Mrs. Day. Stop my mouth, firrah! whoo, whop, ho! Car. Yes. ftop your mouth. What, are you good at a who-bub, ha?

Enter Ruth.

Ruth. What's the matter, forfooth?

Mrs. Day. The matter! Why here's a rude caralier has broke into my house; 'twas he too, that fent the lrift refeal to abufe me, too, within my own walls. Call your father, that he may grant an order to fecure him. 'Tis a dangerous fellow.

Car. Nay, good, pretty gentlewoman, spare your motion.—What must become of me? Teague has made fome ftrange mistakes. [Afide. Rath. Tis he! What shall I do? Now, invention, be equal to my love. [Afide.] Why, your ladyship will spoil all. I fent for this gentleman, and enjoin'd him fecrecy, even to yourfelf, till I had made his way. Oh, fie upon't, I am to blame; but, in truth, I did not think he would have come thefe two hours.

Car. I dare swear the did not; I might very probably not have come at all.

Ruth. How came you to come fo foon, Sir?
Twas three hours before you appointed.
Car. Hey-day! I shall be made believe I came hither on purpole, presently.

Afide.

Ruth. Twas upon a message of his to me, and please your honour, to make his defires known to your ladythip, that he had confider'd on't, and was refolv'd to take the covenant, and give you five hundred pounds, to make his peace, and bring his baliness about again, that he may be admitted in his first condition.

Car. What's this?-D'ye hear, pretty gentlewoman?

Ruch. Well, well, I know your mind: I have done your bufinefs.

Mrs. Day. Oh, his flomach's come down.
Ruth. Sweeten him again, and leave him to mes warrant the five hundred pounds, and-[Wbifpers. Car. Now I have found it; this pretty wench has a mind to be left alone with me, at her peril-

Mrs. Day. I understand thee-Well, Sir, I can pass by rudeness, when I am inform'd there was no intention of it. I leave you and my daughter to beget a right understanding. [Exit Mrs. Day.

Car. We should beget sons and daughters sooner,

What does all this mean? [Afide. Ruth. I am forry, Sir, that your love for me shou'd make you thus rash.

Car. That's more than you know; but you had a mind to be left alone with me, that's certain.

Ruth. 'Tis too plain, Sir; you'd ne'er have run. yourself into this danger elfe.

Car. Nay, now you're out; the danger run after me. Ruth. You may diffemble.

Car. Why, 'tis the proper bufiness here; but we lofe time; you and I are left to beget a right understanding. Come, which way?

Rutb. Whither?

Car. To your chamber or closet.

Ruth. But I'm engaged you shall take the cove-

Car. No, I never fwear when I am bid, Rugh, Bat you wou'd do as bad. Car. That's not against my principles.

Ruth. Thank you for your fair opinion, good Signior Principle. There lies your way, Sir. However, I will own fo much kindnis for you, that I repent not the civility I have done, to free you from the trouble you were like to fall into. Make me a leg, if you please, and cry, Thank you. And so the gentlewoman that defired to be left along with you, defires to be left alone with herfelf, the being taught a right understanding of you.

Car. No: I am riveted; nor shall you march off thus with flying colours. My pretty commander in chief, let us parley a little farther, and but lay down ingenuously the true state of our treaty, The business in short is this: we differ seemingly upon two evils, and mine the leaft, and therefore to be chosen. You had better take me, than I take the covenant.

Ruth. We'll excuse one another.

Car. You would not have me take the covenant

Ruth. No; I did but try you. I forgive your idle loofenels, for that firm virtue. Be conftant to your fair principles, in fpite of fortune.

Car. What's this got into petticoats! Are you not the committee-man's daughter ?

Ruth. Yes. What then? Car. Then am I thankful. I had no defence against thee and matrimony, but thy own father and mother, which are a perfect committee to my Ruth. When the quarrel of the nation is reconciled, you and I shall agree; till when, Sir Enter Teague.

Tea. Are you here then? Upon my shoul, the good colonel Blunt is over-taken again now, and carried to the devil.

Car. How, taken and carried to the devil ! Tea. He defired to go to the devil; I wonder of ages. ways. s! My , good fcent: make! little fcout 7, obw, by blood-

Ca

perally. ah, to after's natters great a unte ations al for u have entleh alto

ain of with bim, comyour

you? 'd to to be great body.

for the I'll

Tage, Afide. fear ch. Mak ad.]

ne in to? por-

tood y, I you not, low non

me

Car. I understand it now, What mifchief's this? Enter Arbella, Ruth, Abel, Col. Carclefs and Ruth, You feem troubled, Sir.

Come, Teague.

Come, Teague,
Rard, Holl, you fhan't go before I know the finels. What d'ye calk of bufinels. What d'ye talk or :

Cor. My friend, my dearest friend, is caught up by rescally bailiffs, and carried to the Devil-tavern. Pray let me go.

Rueb. Stay but a minute, if you have any kindnels for me.

Car. Yes, I do love you.

Rarb. Perhaps I may ferve your friend.

O Arbella, I was going to feek you.

Ruth. The Colonel which thou likeft, is taken by bailiffs; there's his friend too, almost distracted: You know the mercy of thefe times.

Arb. What doft thou tell me? I am ready to fink down !

Ruth, Compose yourfelf, and help him nobly; ou have no way, but to fmile upon Abel, and get him to bail him.

Enter Abel and Obadinh.

Arb. Look, where he and Obadah come; fent hither by providence Oh, Mr. Abel, where have you been this long time? Can you find of your heart to keep thus out of my fight?

Abels Afforedly fome important affaire conftrained my absence, as Obadiah can testify bona fide.
Tea. The devil break your bones a Friday.

Obad. I can do fo, verily, myfelf being a material party.

Car. Pox on 'em, how flow they speak.

Ted. Speak fafter.

A.b. Well, well, you faill go no more out of my fight; I'll not be fatisfied with you bene fides. I have fome occasions that call me to go a little way? you fiell e'en go with me, and good Oba-diah too. You fiell not deny me any thing.

Obadiah, thou falt have the beft; barexalted.

in of all my tenants.

Art. Ruth, how fall we do, to keep thy fwift other from purfuing us? " Robs? Let me alone; as I go by the parlour, where fie fite, big with expectation, I'll give her whifper, that we are going to fetch the very five Arb. How can that be?

Rarb. No queftion now. Will you march, Sir?

Whither ?

Ruth. Lord, how dull thefe men in love are! Why, to your friend. No more words.

Col. Blunt brought in by Bailiffs. A Y, sy, we chought how well you'd

2 Bail. Bluet. Why, you unconfidenable rafeal, are you angry that I am unlucky, or do you want fome fees? I'll give you a

I'll perit 1 Bail. Chefe, chufe, Come, along with him.

Blunt. I'll not go your pace neither, rafcals; I'll go foftly, if it be but to hinder you from taking up fome other honeft gentleman.

Obadiah.

I Bail. How now ! are thefe any of your friends? Blunt. Never, if you fee-women; that's a rule. Arb. [To Abel.] Nay, you need have no seru-ple, 'tis a near kinsman of mine. You do not think, I hope, that I would let you fuffer-Youthat muit be nearer than a kinfman to me.

Abel. But my mother doth not know it. Arb. If that be all, leave it to me and Ruth; we'll fave you harmlefs : befides, I cannot marry, if my kiniman be in prison; he must convey my effate, as you appoint; for 'tis all in him. must please him.

Abel. The confideration of that doth convince me, Obadiah, 'tis necessary for us to fet at liberty this gentieman, being a truftee for Mrs. Arbella's estate. Tell 'em, therefore, that you and I will bail this gentleman-and, d'ye hear! tell them who lam.

Obad. I shall: Gentlemen, this is the honourable Mr. Abel Day, the first-born of the honourable Mr. Day, chairman of the committee of fequestrations; and I myfelf, by name Obadiah, am clerk to the faid honourable committee.

1 Bail. Well, Sir, we know Mr. Day, and Mr.

Abel.

Abel. Yes, that's I; and I will bail this gentleman. I believe you dare not except against the bail; nay, you shall have Obadiah's too, one that the flate truffs.

I Bail. With all our hearts, Sir .- But there are charges to be paid. Arb. Here, Obadiah, take this purfe, and difcharge them, and give the bailiffs twenty faillings to drink.

Car. This is miraculous!

T Beil. A brave lady !-- I'faith, miftres, we'll drink your health.

Abel. She's to be my wife, as fure as you are here: what Tay you to that now?

I Boil. [And.] That's impossible : here's something more in this.—Honourable Mr. Abel, the theriff's deputy is hard by in another room, if you please to go thither, and give your bail, Sir.

Abel. Well, thew us the way, and let him know who I am. Excunt Abel, Obadiah, and Bailiffs.

Car. Hark ye, pretty Mrs. Ruth, if you were fequently against monarchy, two princes should have you and that gentlewoman.

Rath No, no, you'll ferre my turn; I am not

Car. Do but Iwear then that thou art not the iffue of Mr. Day; and, though I know 'tis a iye, I'll be content to be corened, and believe.

Ruth. Fie, fie; you can't abide taking of oaths. Look, look, how your friend and mine take aim at one mother. Is he fmitten ?

Chr. Cupid has not fuch another wounded fubject; nay, and is vex'd he is in leve too. Troth, Ruth. Peace! the begins, as need requires.

Arb. You are free, Sir.

Blunt. Not to free suyou think.

Blunt. Nothing, that I'll tell you.
A.b. Why, Sir?
Blunt. You'll laugh at me.

Arb. Have you perceived me apt to commit such rudenes? Pray let me know it.

Bluer. Upon two conditions you hall know it.

Arb. Well, make your own leve.

bit, I'l Blunt man : ind Lan patience Arb. Ruth. E.hat Arb.

Blum.

m an h

Ab.

Blunt.

ready, the gether

d apor

when I a a the fi

Ruth.

Car. Blunt thee mo rrady, 1 misforti love yo and laug Car.

Blunt

Rath fellow ! Arb. Ruth colonel Arba Ruth

I'll mal Arb.

Ruth

Arb.

ame t under p Ruth of she Art diately

Ruti Squire newly. And Rever Ruti by bail Aba freedos doth p of me. 100 to you acquai went.

Twas Abe my op obition pounds their f prop believe it; you have this acknowledgment them go before we knew where to find to them.

Abel. That was the want of being us'd to imhom an honest heart, one that would crack a string for you; thus's one thing.

Ab. Well, the other.

efs and riends?

a rule.

o feru-

do not

You-

Ruth;

marry,

vey my

. We

onvince

liberty

rbella's will bail

holam.

onour-

onour-

of fe-ah, am nd Mr.

gentle-he bail;

hat the

here are

nd difhillings

, we'll you are sfomeel, the

if you know

Bailiffs.

u were ld have am not ot the a lye, oaths.

ce aim

d fub-

Troth,

it fuch

23.

Bluet. The other is only, that I may fland for wether with your promite not to call me back : mt apon thefe terms, I give you leave to laugh then I am gone .- Careleis, come, frand ready, that, n the fign given, we may vanish together.

Ruth. If you pleafe, Sir, when you are ready to bit, I'll cry one, two, three, and away.

Blunt. Be pleased to forbear, good fmart gentleroman: you have leave to jeer when I am gone, ind lam just going; by your fpleen's leave, a little Arb. Pr'ythee, peace. Ruth. I thall contain, Sir.

Bhar. That's much for a woman to do.

Arb. Now, Sir, pertorm your promife. Blunt. Carelefs, have you done with your woman ?

Biant. Nay, I have thanked her already ; pr'y. thee no more of that dull way of gratitude. Stand no woman will hardly do again. trady, man ; yet nearer the door. So, now my misfortune that I promised to discover, is, that I bet you above my fenfe or reason. So farewel, chance, man. Come, Teague, give us a long. and laugh. Come, Careless.

Excunt.

Ruth. Was there ever fuch humour?

Arb. As I live, his confession thews nobly. Rath. It flews madly, I am fure. An ill-bred fellow! not indure a woman to laugh at him! Art. He's honest, I dare fwear.

Ruth. That's more than I dare fwear for my colonel.

Arb. Out upon him !

Rath. Nay, 'the but want of a good example; I'll make him fo.

Arb. But d'ye hear, Ruth! we were horribly to ame that we did not enquire where they lodged, er pretence of fending to them about their own

Ruth. I have an invention upon the old account the five hundred pounds, which fall make

Art. Excellent ! the trout Abel will bite imme distely at that bait.

Enter Abel and Obadiah.

Ruth. Peace! fee where Abel and the gentle squire of low degree, Obadiah, approach, having ly entered themselves into bonds.

Ard. Which I'll be fure to tell his mother, if he ever more troublefome.

Ruth, And that he's turned an arrant cavaller, by bailing one of the brood,

Abd. al have, according to your defires, given estom to your kinfman and truftee. I suppose he deth perceive that you may have power in right of me

Art, Good Mr. Abel, I am fincerely beholden to you, and your authority.

Rub. O, fie upon t, brother, I did forget to squaint you with a bufface's before the gentlemen went. O me, what a fieve-like memory have !! Twas an important affair too.

Abel. If you discover it so mey I thall render you my opinion upon the whole.

oblinary, and would now prefeat five hundred pretty drunk?

[Afide, pounds to your good henourable mother, to fland Tex. I warrant you, I will make him and mytheir friend, that they may be permitted to take felf too drunk, for thy fweet fake.

Blunt, Firft, I thank ye, y'have freed me nobly : | the covenant ; and we, negligent we, have let portant affairs, It is ill to neglect the accepting of heir conversion, together with their money.

Ruth. Well, there is but one way ; Obadiah may enquire them out.

Ohad. The bailiffs did fay they were gone to the Abel. Haften thither, good Obadiah, as if you had met my honourable father, and defire them to come unto his house, about an important affair, that is for their good.

Obad. I shall use expedition. Abel. And we will haften our bring united in the bonds of matrimony.

Arb. Soft and fair goes far. Excust. Enter the two Colonels, and Teague, at at the Towers.

Car. Did ever man get away fo craftily from the thing he lik'd? Terrible bufines! afraid to tell a woman what the defired to hear. To leave a handsome woman; a woman that came to be bound body for body for thee, one that does that which Blunt. What's that?

Car. Love thee, and thy blant humour; a mere

Tea. I am a cup too low.

Car. Here then. Gives bim a Clafs. Tea. I should like to wet t'other eye. Car. Here.

SONG by Teague.

Last Patrick-mass night 'bove all'days in the year, I fet out for London before I get there: But when I took leave of my own natural flore, O, whitil-a-lu, I did foreech, hawl, and rear. 11.

I did wake in the morning, while yet it was night, And could not see one bit of land but was quite out of fight; So, with tumbling and toffing, and jolting poor Teague, My flomach was fea-fick in lejs than a league.

At Chefter, to forw my bigb birth and great mind, I took a place in the coach, but walk'd in it behind; The fear they did roar, and the winds were uncivil, And, upon my foul, I shought we were all blown to

At Coventry next, where you fee Peoping Tom, Who was kill d for a look at the Duchels's bum; But when ber grace rid on ber faddle all bare Devil burn me, no evender that old Such did flore. \\ Enter Obeniah.

Car. Peace, man, here's Jupiter's Mercusy. Is his meffage to us, trow?

Obad- Gentlemen, you are opportunely overtaken and found out.

Blunt. How s this?

Obad. I come unto you in the name of the konourable Mr. Day, who defires to speak with you both about some important affair, which is conducing for your good.

Blunt. What train is this?

Cor. Peace, let us not be rath .-

Tea. Eh!

Car. Were it not possible that you could enter-The two gentlemen have repented of their tain this fellow in the next room, till he were coary, and would new prefeat five hundred pretty drank?

Some bufinefs, that Car. Be fure, Teague .will take us up a very little time to finish, makes us defire your patience till we difpatch it. In the mean time, Sir, do us the favour to call for a glass of fack, in the next room; Teague shall wait upon you, and drink your master's health.

Obad. It needeth not; nor do I use to drink over him as they do in Irelana: Oh, oh, oh.

healths. Car. None but your mafter's, Sir, and that by way of remembrance. Obad. We that have the affairs of flate under our tuition cannot long delay; my presence may the Lieutenant's. be required for carrying on the work. Tea. Give me

Gor. Nay, Sir, it shall not exceed above a quarer of an hour; perhaps we'll wait upon you to Mr. Day presently. Pray, Sir, drink but one glass or Day presently. we would wait upon you ourselves, but that draws bim off.] would hinder us from going with you.

Obad. Upon that confideration I shall attend a little.

Car. Go, wait upon him-Now, Teague, or never.

Tea. I will make him fo drunk as can be, upon [Except Teague and Obsdiah.

any shoul. [Exeunt Teague and Obadiah.

Blune. What a devil should this message mean?

Car. Tis too plain; this cream of committee rascals, who has better intelligence than a statefecretary, has heard of his fon Abel's being ham-per'd in the cause of the wicked, and in a revenge would intice us to perdition.

Blust. If Teague could be so fortunate as to make him drunk, we might know all.

Buter Musician.

Mus. Gentlemen, will you have any musick? Blunt. Pr'ythee no, we are both out of tune. Car. Pish, we will never be out of humour, Enter Teague and Obadiah drunk.

See and rejoise, where Toague with laurel comes.

Blant. And the vanquished Obadiah, with nothing fixed about him but his eyes.

Tea. Well now, upon my floul, Mr. Obadiah fings as well as the man now. Come then, will you fing an Irish fong after me?

Obad. I will fing Irith for the king now.

Tea. I will fing for the king as well as you. let me fee. Hark you now !

He fings an Irish fong, and Obadiah tries.

beided is at La ses 10. N. G. at ry maig a

Ob, Teady foley, you are my darling, You are my looking-glafs, both night and morning; I had rather have you without a farthing, Than Bryan Gauttchar, with his house and yarden La, ral, Ady

O Norab, agra, I do not doubt you And for that reason I his and mouth you; And if there was ten and twenty about you, Devil burn me, if I would go without you.

La, ral, Hdy. Obad. That is too hard ftuff; I cannot do thefe and thefe material matters,

Tea. Here, now, we will take fome fnuff for the king-So there, lay it upon your hand; put one of your nofes to it now; fo, fouff now. Upon my shoul, Mr. Obad. Commit. will make a brave hast any mettle, now's the time.

Arb. To do what?

Obad. I will fnuff for the king no more. Mr. Teague, give me some more sack, and fing Englith, for my money.

Tea, I will tell you that Irish is as good and better ab Irish tune ? [Dance, Obadiah tumbles drivy, no less confident countenances.

Tea. Obid, Obid ! upon my foul I believe he's dead.

Car. Dead!

Tea. Dead drunk. Poor Obid is fick, and I will

Car. Peace, Teague, you'll aiarm the enemy. Here's a shilling, call a chair, and let them carry him in this condition to his kind mafter. If you meet the ladies, fay we would speak with them at

Tea. Give me the thirteen, and I will give him an Irish fedan. Col. How's that ?

Tea. This way. [Takes bim by the beels, and Enter Mr. Day and Mrs. Day.

Mrs. Day. Difpatch quickly, I fay, and fay I faid it; many things fall between the lip and the cup.

Mr. Day. Nay, duck, let thee alone for coun-

Mrs. Day. Why then you would have wanted a woman, and a belper too.

Mr. Day. I profess so I should, and a notable one too, though I fay it before thy face, and that's no ill one.

Mrs. Day. Come, come, you are wand'ring from the matter; dispatch the marriage, I say, whilft the is thus taken with our Abel. Women are uncertain.

Mr. Day. How if the should be coy?

Mrs. Day. You are at your ifs again ! if the be foolish, tell her plainly what she must trust to: no Abel, no land. Plain-dealing's a jewel. Have you the writings drawn, as I advised you, which she muft fign ?

Mr. Day. Ay, I warrant you, duck; bere, here they be. Oh, the has a brave effate!

Mrs. Day. What news you have!

Mr. Day. Look you, wife

[Day pulls our writings, and lays out bit keys. Mrs. Day. Pifh, teach your grannum to fpin;

Enter a Servant. Serv. May it please your honour, your good neighbour Zacharian is departing this troublefome life: he has made your honour his executor, but cannot depart till he has feen your honours.

Mr. Day. Alas! (alas! a good man will leave us .- Come, good ducke, let us haften. Where is

Obadiah, to usher you? O

Mrs. Day. Why, Obadiah !- A varlet, to be out of the way at such a time; truly he moveth my wrath. Come, husband, along; I'll take Abel'ia his place, Exeunt. Enter Ruth and Arbella.

Ruth. What's the meaning of this slarm? There's fome carrion discover'd ; the crows are all gone upon a fudden. Arb. The fine Day call'd most fiercely for Obadiah. Look here, Ruth, what have they left behind ?

Ruth. As I live, It is the Day's bunch of key,

Ruth. To fly out of Egypt. Enter Abel.

Arb, Peace, we are betray'd elfe; as fure ar cin be, wench, he's come back for the keys.
Ruth. We'll forfwear'em in confident words, and Abel. nourabl fence of Arb. April-Ruth Arb. Ruth.

that liv fear not colonela

Arb.

the cont art. C Ruth: the clos thee; a the ene Arb.

apprehe Ruth covey, Arb. En Tea.

Lieuten

that dea Arb. Tea. follow y Obad. Enter & Mr. 1 into flee Mrs. grievous

M. L dock, f Mrs.

s long that ? Mr. L Obadiah Mrt. iev'd th dish over been, fi Obad. 1 Mr. D and fhare p my n n a re my keysaps up. keys, du Mrs. L

he a fool Warrant Why don ppifh, the door ? Mr. D.

Mrs. L reature, o a bed, a Abel. I

Obed, 5 iah sings

nourable rather and mother forth, and in the ab-I will in't.

he's howl

nemy.

carry

If you

em at e him

s, and xeunt.

y I faid cup.

counnted a otable that's g from whilft

are un-

the be to: no

ave you

ich the re, here

bis keys. fpin;

or good blefome

or, but

If leave

Vhere is be out

veth my Abelia

Exeunt.

alarm?

s are all ely for they left of keys,

if theu

re as can

ords, and

April-He put me in a cruel fright. Ruth. If I mils, hang-me!

Arb. But whither shall we go? Ruth. To a friend of mine, and of my father's, that lives near the temple, and will harbour us, fear not; and fo fet up for ourfelves, and get our

Arb. Nay, the mischief that I have done, and the condition we are in, makes me as ready as thou art. Come, let's about it.

Ruth. Stay; do you stand centinel here. That's the closet-window; I'll call for thee, if I need thee; and be fure to give notice of any news of [Exit. the enemy.

Arb. I warrant thee .- Hark! what's that-this apprehension can make a noise when there is none. Ruth. I have 'em, I have 'em; nay the whole covey, and his feal at arms bearing a dog's leg. -[Above.

Arb. Come, make hafte then.

Enter Teague, with Obadiah on bis back.

Tes. Long life to you, Madam; my master is at Litutenant Story's and wants to speak to you, and that dear creature too.

Arb. and Ruth. Conduct us to him.

Tea. Oh, that I will --- Come along, and I will [Excunt all but Obadiah.

Obad. Some small beer, good Mr. Teague. Enter as return'd, Mr. Day, Mrs. Day, and Abel. Mr. Day. He made a good end, and departed as

Mrs. Day. I'll affure you his wife took on iroully; I do not believe the 'll marry this half year. Mr. Day. He died full of exhortation. Ha, detk, shou'ds be forry to lose me?

Mrs. Day. Lose you! I warrant you you'll live a long as a better thing—Ah, Lord! what's that ? Obadiah fings. Mr. Day. How now! what's this?-

Obsdiah-and in a drunken diftemper affuredly! Mrt. Day, O fie upon't, who wou'd have befish overcome with the creature ? - Where have you been, firrah ? Obad. D-d-drinking the ki-ki-king'shealth. Mr. Day. O terrible! fome difgrace put upon us, and fhame brought within our walls. I'll go lock ap my neighbour's will, and come down and shew him a reproof.—How—how—I cannot feel my keys—nor—[He feels in bit pockets, and pap.] hear 'em gingle .- Didft thou fee my eys, duck?

Mrs. Day. Duck me no ducks. I fee your keys! he a fool's head of your own! Had I kept them, I warrant they had been forth-coming. You are fo dapish, you throw em up and down at your tail. Why don't you go look if you have not left them in the door?

Mr. Day. I go, I go, duck. [Exis. Mrs. Day, Here, Abel, take up this fallen trature, who has left his uprightness; carry him a bed, and when he is return'd to himfelf, I will ort him.

Abel. He is exceedingly overwhelmed.

[He goes to lift bim up. Oled. Stand away, I fay, and give me fome more Tear of the time of the with its ith fing: Teady Foley.] Whete's Mr. Teague?

Enter Mr. Day. Mr. Day. Undone, undone! robb'd, robb'd! the note of Obadiah, I am enforced to attend their doors left open, and all my writings and papers mours; and fo I bid you heartily farewel. [Exit. folen! Undone, undone!—Ruth, Ruth!

Arb. Given from his mouth, this tenth of . Mrs. Day: Why, Ruth, I fay! Thieves, thieves! Enter Servant.

Serv. What's the matter, forfooth ! Here has been no thieves: I have not been a minute out of the house.

Mrs. Day. Where's Ruth, and Mrs. Arbella? Serv. I have not seen them a pretty while, Mr. Day. 'Tis they have robb'd me, and taken away the writings of both their estates. Undone,

Mrs. Day. This came with flaying for you, [To Abe!.] coxcomb, we had come back fooner elfe: you flow drone, we must be undone for your dulinels. Obad. Be not in wrath.

Mrs. Day. I'll wrath you, ye rascal you. I'll teach you, you drunken rascal, and you, sober dull man.

Obad. Your feet are fwift and violent; the motion will make them fume.

Mrs. Day. D'you lye too, ye drunken rascal? Mr. Day. Nay, patience, good duck, and let's lay out for thefe women; they are the thieves. Mrs. Day. 'Twas you that left your keys upon the table to tempt them: ye need cry, good duck, be patient. Bring in the drunken raical, ye booby: when he is fober, he may discover something. Come, take him up; I'll have 'em hunted. [Exeun: Mr. Day and Mrs. Day.

Abel. I rejoice yet, in the midft of my fufferings, that my miffres faw not my rebukes. Come, Obadiah, I pray, raise yourself upon your feet, and walk.

Obad. Have you taken the covenant? That's the question.

Abel. Yea.

Obad. And will you drink a health to the king? That's t'other question.

Abel. Make not thyfelf a fcorn.

Obad. Scorn in my face! Void, young Satan.

Abel. I pray you, walk in, I shall be affisting.
Obad. Stand off, and you shall perceive, ty my steadfast going, that I am not drunk. Look ye now-fo, foftly, foftly; good Obadiah, gently and fleadily, for fear it should be faid that thou are in drink. So; gently and uprightly, Obadiah.

[He moves bis legs, but flands fill.

Abel. You do not move. Obad. Then do I stand still, as fast as you go. Enter Mrs. Day.

Mrs. Day. What, stay all day! There's for you, Sir; [To Abel.] you are a sweet youth to leave in truft. Along, you drunken rascal; [To Obadiah.] I'll fet you both forward.

Obad. The Philistines are upon us, and Day has broke loofe from darkness; high keeping has made [She beats them of. her fierce.

Mrs. Day. Out, you drunken rascal! I'll make you move, you beaft. [Excunt.

CT V.

Enter Col. Careless and Teague.

Car. HAVE you paid the money I fent you with?

Tea. Yes, but I will carry no more, look you there now.

Care. Why, Teague?

. Teas God fa' my shoul now, I shall run away

Car. Pift ! they art too heneft.

Tes. That I am tao, upon my floul now; but whither out of fight, I would acquaint you with the devil is not honers, that he is not; he would the business.

The devil is not honers, that he is not; he would the business.

Lieu. My house, ladies, is at that door, where me go to this little long both the colonels lodge. Pray command it. Colone place; and upon my floul, was carrying me into Ireland, for he made me go by a dirty place like a lough now; and therefore I know new it was the way to Ireland. Then I would flay fill, and then he would make me go on; and then I would go to one fide, and he would make me go to t'other tide; and then I got a little farther, and did run then; and upon my shoul the davil could not catch me; and then I did pay the money: but I will carry no money, that I will not.

Car. But thou sha't, Teague, when I have more to fend; thou art proof now against temptarion.

Tre. Well then, if you fend me with money again, and if I do not come to thee upon the time, the devil will make me be gone then with the money. Here's a paper for thee, 'tis a quit way indeed.

Car. That's well faid, Teague [Reads. Enter Mr. Day, Obaoiah, and Soldiers. Obad. See, Sir, Providence hath directed us;

there is one of them that cloathed me with hame, and the most malignant among the wicked

Mr. Day. Soldiers, feize him. I charge him with treason! Here's a warrant to the keeper, as I told you. Car. What's the matter, rascals?

Mr. Day. You shall know that, to your cost, hereafter Away with him.

Car. Teague, tell em I shall not come home to night. I am engaged.
Tes. I prythee, be not engaged.

Car. Gentlemen, I am guilty of nothing, that I know of.

Mr. Day That will appear, Sir. - A way with him. Tea. What will you so with my maiter. now. Mr. Day. Be quiet, Sir, or you shall go with him.

Tea. That I will, for all you, you old fool.

Teague, come hither.

Tea. Sir

Cur. Here, take this key, open my bureau, and urn all the papers you find there; and here, burn this letter.

Tea. Pray give me that pretty clean letter, to fend to my mother.

Car. No, no; be fure to do as I tell you.

Mr. Day. Away with him. We will be avenged on the fcorner; and I'll go home, and tell my duck daughter trouble you? You love the gentlewom this part of my good fortune. [Excunt. Enter Col. Blunt, and Lieutenant. Enter Chairmen with Jedans; Ruth and Arbelia

Ruth. That's thy colonel, Arbella; catch him quickly, or he'll fly again.

Arb. What flould I do?

Ruth. Put forth fome good words. Advance. Arb. Sir.

Blunt. Lady? Tis the.
Arb. 1 with, Sir, that my friend and I had fome conveniency of speaking to you; we now want she affifunce of some noble friend.

Blunt. Then I om happy bring me but to do fomething for you. I would have my actions talk, not I. My friend will be here immediately ; I dare and we in this condition ?- Sir, I do believe you noble, truly worthy. If we might withdraw my Ruth. But what ?

Blust. Good, overcharged gentlewoman, spare me but a little.

both the colonels lodge. Pray command it. Colone Carelese will immediately be here.

Enter Teagur.

Tes. He will not come; that commit rogue Div has got him with men in red coats, and he is gon to prifon here below this freet. He would not let me go with him, i'faith, but made me come tell thee now.

Ruth. O, my heart! - Tears, by your leave, a while .- [Wipes ber eyes.] D'yeh-ar, Arbella! here, take all the trinkets, only the bait that I'll ufe.

Blutt. Carelefe in prifon! Pardon me, Madam; I must leave you for a little while; pray be con-

Arb. What do you mean to do, Sir?

Blunt. I cannot tell; yet I must attempt fomething. You shall have a sudden account of all things. You fay you dare believe; pray be as goo as your word ; and whatever accident befals me, know I love you dearly.

Lieu. Madam, pray let my house be honour with you. Be confident of all respect and faith. Enter Ruth with a Soldier.

Ruth. Come, give me the bundle: so; now the habit. 'Tis well; there's for your pains. Be fecret, and wait where I appointed you. Sold. If I fail, may I die in a ditch.

Exit

Ruth. Now, for my wild colonel.

Enter Keeper.

Buth. Have not you a prisoner, Sir, in you euflody, one Colonel Careless!

Keep. Yes, Miftress; and committed by you father, Mr. Day.

Rurb. May I fpeak with him, Sir? Keep. Very freely, Mittrels; there's no order to forbid any to come to him. To fay truth, 'tit th most pleasant'ft gentleman-I'll call him forth. Ruth. O' my conscience, every thing must be love with him. Now for my last hopes; if the fail, I'll use the ropes myself:

Enter Keeper and Carelefs.

Cor. Mr. Day's daughter speak with me? Keep. Ay, Sir, there the is. Rush. Oh, Sir, does the name of Mr. Day

Car. Yes, I do love the gentlewoman you feta of, most exceedingly.

Ruth. And the gentlewoman loves you. Be what luck this is, that Day's daughter thould en be with her, to fpoil all !

Car. Not a whit one way ; I have a pretty ros within, dark, and convenient.

Ruth. For what?

Cor. For you and I to give counter-fecuity is our kindnels to one another.
Ruth. But Mr. Day's daughter will be there, to Car. 'Tis dark ; we'll me er fee her.

Roth: You care not who you are wicked sit

Methinks a prifon should tame you.

Car. Is this your business? Did you come me virtuously, I'll free you from prison, and a Car. Yes, I cou'd love thee all manner of we

Car. butifu with t of Gil Rut Car Rut Car

lye s

Thy a brance

to hav

Ruti

while Run their bolder

Rad My B Anne, and m bella a all the with v mine. Car Ros gour d ceive !

of you

dow you Car Ill ju Car Bot p

Car ttalos Car Joth t arrant could be car Car Ru Car draw

> Bla hou

Ru

Sol er th

you wiel r, when Colone

ogue Div e is gon ld nor le come tel leave, 1 la! here, 'll ufe. Exit Madam npt forme nt of a be as goo efals me honour

y be con-

faith. , now th . Be fe-[Exit

in you by you

o order t h, 'tie th forth. must bei

ne ? Exit Mr. Day iewom

you fpta rou. I ould en etty ro cutity is here, to ked wit u come Is this e ow to k and n

it's to r of wa

Co. The name of that safcal that goothee. Yet lye too; he ne'er got a limb of that. Pox on't !
Thy mother was at unlucky to bear thee. Buthow hall we falve that? Take off but these incumbrances, and I'll purchase thee in thy smock; but to have such a flaw in my title

Rath. Can I help mature? Car. Or I honour? Why, hark you now; do but fwear me into a pretence; do but betray me with an eath, that thou were not begot on the body of Gillian, my father's kitchen-maid,

Car. Why, the honourable Mrs. Day, that now is, Retb. Will you believe me if I swear?
Car. Ay, that I will, though I know all the while 'tis not true.

Rub. I fwear, then, by all that's good, I am not their daughter,

Car. Poor, kind, perjur'd, pretty one, I am beholden to thee. Woud'st damn thyself for me?

Rath. You are mistaken. I have try'd you fully.

My name is not fo godly a one as Ruth, but plain Anne, daughter to Sir Paul Thorowgood. 'Tis too long to tell you how this Day got me, an infant, and my estate, into his power, and made me past for his own daughter. But two hours fince, Arbells and I found an opportunity of stealing away all the writings that belong'd to my estate, and her with whom I left her, as foon as I had intelligence of your minfortune, to try to get your liberty; which if I can do, you have your estate, for I have

Car. Thou more than Rub. No, no, no raptures at this time. Here's your difguife, purchas'd from a true-hearted red-coat. Let this line down when 'tis dark, and you hall draw up a ladder of ropes. As foon as you redow you fall find yours, more than her own, not Ruth, but Anne. Cer. I'll leap into thy arms-

Rurb. So you may break your neck. If you do, But time feals on our wards-Ob-Ill jump too. ferve all I told you. So, farewel.

Car. Nay, as the good follows nie to fay, let us ast part with dry lips One kifs.

Rath. Not a bit of me, till I am all yours.

Cer. Your hand, then, to thew I am grown ttasonable. A poor compounder.

arrant a rogue as thy quondam father, Day, if I could not cry, to leave you a brace of minutes,

Ruth. Away! we grow foolish-farewel-yet, be eareful-Nay, go in.

Car. Do you go first.
Ruth. Nay, fie, go in.

Car. We'll fairly, then, divide the victory, and draw off together .- So-I will have the last look.

[Enenat feverally, looking at one another. Enter Col. Blunt, and Soldier. Blust. No more words. I do believe, nay I know ou art honest. I may live to thank thee better. Sol. I fcorn any encouragement to love my king, er those that serve him; I took pay under these people, with a design to do him service. The lieutenant knows it.

Bluar. He has told me fo. No more words. Thou art a nobie fellow. Thou art fure his win-

Sal, Fear it not-

Blunt. Here, then, carry him this hadder of ropes. So; now, give me the coat. Any not a word to him, but hid him dispatch, when he fees the coaft clear. He shall be waited for, at the boxtom of his window. Give him thy fword, too, if he defires it.

Sal. I'll difpatch it, inftantly; therefore get to your place.

Blunt. I warrant ye.

Enter Teague.

Tea. Have you done every thing, then? By my thoul, now, yonder is the man with the hard name; that man, now, that I made drunk for thee; Mr. Tay's rafcal. He is coming along there behind; now, upon my thoul, that he is.

Blust. The rafcal comes for fome mischief.

Teague, now or never play the man.

Tea. How flould I be a man, then? Blum. Thy mafter is never to be got out, if this rogue gets hither : meet him therefore, Teague, in the most winning manner thou canst, and make him once more drunk, and it shall he called the Second Edition of Obadiah, gut forth with Irish sotes upon him; and if he will not go driak with

Tea. I will carry him on my back, if he will not go; and if he will not be drunk, I will cut his throat then, that I will, for my fweet mafter, now, that I will.

Blunt. Dispatch, good Teagues and dispatch him too, if he will not be conformable; and if thou canft but once more be victorious, bring him in triumph to Lieutenant Story's, there shall be the general rendezvous. Now, or never, Teague.

Tea. I warrant you, I will get drink into his pate, or I will brake it for him, that I will, I warrant you. He hall not come after you now. [Ex.

Enter Carelefs. Blunt. What's this? a foldier in the place of Careless ? I am betrayed, but I'll end chis rafcal's duty.

Gar. How, a foldier | Betray'd! this rafcal than't laugh at me. Both draw.

Blunt. Dog. Car. How, Blunt! Blust. Careles

Car. You guels firewdly. Plague, what con-trivance hath fet you and I a tilting atone another?

Blunt. How the devil got you a foldier's habit? Cer. The fame friend, for aught I know, that furniff'd you. Thiskind gentlewomanis Ruth fill.

Ruth. Who's there !

Car. Two notable charging red-coats,

Ruth. As I live, my heart is at my mouth. Car. Pr'ythee, let it come to thy lips, that I may kifs it.

Rush. How in the name of wonder got you hither? Can. Why, I had the ladder of ropes, and came Blumr. Then the mistake is plainer: 'twas I that fent the foldier with the ropes.

Ruth. What an escape was this! Come, let's lose no time; here's no place to explain matters in.

Car. I will flay to tell thee, I thall never deferve thee. Ruth. Tell me fo when you have had me a little

Bester Mr. Day, Mrs. Day, and Mrs. Chat, Mrs. Day. Are you fore of this, neighbour Chat? while. Come, follow m Mrs. Chat. I'm as fure of it, as I am that I have nofe to my facer to alk out one queftion. Is my daughter Ruth

Mrs. Chat. She was not, when I faw Mrs. Arhouse, but that I know Mrs. Arbella, the rich heirefs, that Mr. Abel was to have had, good gentleman, if he has his due. They never fulpected me; for I used to buy things of my neighbour Story, before the married the lieutenant; and sepping in to fee Mrs. Story that now is, my neigh-bour Wift-Well that was, I faw, as I told you, this very Mrs. Arbella; and I warrant Mrs. Ruth is not fur off."

Mrs. Day. Let me advide then, horband.
Mr. Day. Dol good duck; I'll warrant 'emMrs! Day: You'll warrant, when I have done

. the bafinets.

diers; and when he has brought the foldiers, let them tay at the door, and come up himfelf; and then, if fair means will not do! four thall.

Mr. Days Excellent well addied, Tweet duck.

Ah! let thee alone. Be gone, Abel, and observe the place. We'll be revenued for robbing us, and for all their tricks.

Abil. I think perform to sure the few us the best way. Mrs. Chas, the state shall know what good for vice you have sone.

Mrs. Chael Tehank your timour!

won Bucer Arbella and Lleutenant. Lien. Pray, Madami weep no more! spare your tears till you know they have milenried.

Emir Ruth, Carelefe, and Biunt. Arb. Oh, my dear friend! My dear, dear Ruth, Cars Pray, none of these phiegmatic hugs. There, take your-colonel; my captain and I can hug afresh every minute. Ruth. When did we hug last, good foldier ! Car. I have done nothing but hug thee in fancy, ever fince you Ruth curnen Annice. Arb. You are welcome, Sir: I cannot deny I that'd in all your dangers

Blunt. I know not what to fay, nor how to tell, how dearly; how well-I have you. Ash, No more; I'll fave you the labour of courtthip, which should be too tedious to all plain and houest natures. It is enough; I know you love me. Blunt. Or may I perith, whill I am swearing it, Enter Prentice.

Lies. How now, Juck !

Bey. Oh, mafter, undone! Here's Mr. Day, the committee man; and his fierce wife, come into the thop. Mrs. Chat brought them in, and they fay they will come up; they know that Mrs. Arbella, and their daughter Ruch, are here. Deny 'em if you dare, they fay.

Lieu. Go down, boy, and tell 'em I'm coming Frit Boy. to 'em.

Rus. Come, be chearful; I'll defend you all against the assaults of captain Day, and major-geperal Day, his new drawn-up wife. Give me my amminition, [To Arbelle.] the papers, woman. So, if I do not rout 'em, fall on ; lot's ail d'e together, and make no more graves but one.

Blumt. Slife, I love her now, for all he has icer'd me fo.

Ruth. Stand you all drawn up as my referve-fo: I for the forlorn hope.

Arb. They come, wench; charge 'em bravely; I'll fecond thee with a volley.

Ruth. They'll not fland the first charge, fear not; now the Day breaks.

Car, Wou'd 'twere his neck were broke,

Enter Mr. Day, and Mrs. Day.

Mrs. Day. Ah, ha! My fine run-aways, have I found you? What, you think my hutband's he-nour lives without intelligence. Marry, come up. Mr. Day. My duck tells you how 'tie--We-

Mrs. Day. Why then let your duck tell 'em how 'tis! Yet, as I was faying; you shall perceive we abound in intelligence: elfe twere not for us to go about to keep the nation quiet; but if you, Mrs. Arbella, will deliver up what you have folen, and Submit, and return with us, and this ungracious Ruth-

Rath. Anne, if you pleafe. Mrs. Day. Who gave you that name, pray? Ruth. My god fathers and god-mothers;, forfooth, I can answer a leaf farther.

Mr. Day. Duck, good duck, a word; I do not fike this name Annice.

Mrs. Day. You are ever in a fright, with a farivell'd heart of your own. Well, gentlewoman, you are merry.

Arb. As newly tome out of your wardhips. I hope Mr. Abel is well.

Mrs. Day. Yes, he is well; you shall fee him presently; yes, you shall fee him.

Car. That is, with mirmidons. Come, good

Anne, no more delay, fall on ... Ruch. Then, before the furious Abel approaches with his red-coats, who perhaps are now murching under the conduct of that expert captain in weighty matters, know the articles of our treaty are only thefe: this Arbella will keep her eftate, and not marry Abel, but this gentleman; and I Anne, daughter to Sir Bafil Thorowgood, and not Ruth, as has been thought, have taken my own effate, together with this gentleman, for better for worle. We were modeff, though thieves, and only plundered our own.

Mrs. Day. Yes, gentlewoman, you took fomething elfe, and that my hufband can prove; it may coft you your necks, if you do not submit.

Ruth. Truth on't is, we did take something elfe.

Mrs. Day. Oh, did you & ? Rurb. Pray give me leave to speak one word in

Mes. Dep. Do fo, do fo; are you going to compound? Oh, 'tis father Day, now ! Rarb. D'ye hear, Sir; how long is't fince you have practis'd physic? Takes bim afide.

Mr. Day. Phyfic! What d'ye mean? Ruth. I mean physic. Look ye, here's a small prescription of yours. D'ye know this hand-writing!

Mr. Day. I'am undone. Ruib. Here's another upon the fame subject. This young one, I believe, came into this wicked world for want of your preventing dofe; it will not be taken now neither It feems your wenches are wilful: nay, I do not wonder to fee 'em have mote confcience than you have.

Mr. Day: Peace, good Mrs. Anne! I am undone,

if you betray me.

Emer Abel, who goes to bis fotber. Abel. The foldiers are come.

Mr. Day. Go and fend 'em away, Abel; here's no need; no need, now.

Mrs. Day. Are the foldiers come, Abel ?

D'you they m Ruth bufines to frie Mr.

Abel

Mr.

but fine

If we w

Mrs.

let us Mrs trufted tation fit nov Mr.

all to duck, Car ferce ! imall ! Rut

> Mr the hy wench will; Ari in bor a ftep Ru hold fhame autho read t and c frien coun upon mean in w

belie

man

kifs :

ferve-fo:

bravely; erge, fear

ays, have and's hos come up. -Weem how

ce.

rceive we r us to go ou, Mrs. olen, and ngracious

I do not with a ewoman, hips. I ray? rs ;-

fee him e, good proaches arching weighty are only and not Anne, Ruth, eftate, worfe. y plunforteit may ng elfe.

o comice you n afide. a fmall riting!

word in ubject. wicked ill not es are e mote ndone, here's

if we were all friends-

Mrs. Day. Oh, are you at your ifs again? D'you think they shall make a fool of me, though they make an als of you? Call 'em up, Abel, if they will not submit; call up the soldiers, Abel.

Ruth. Brother Abel, the bird is Ruth. Why, your fierce honour shall know the shall be released from your bonds.

bufiness that makes the wife Mr. Day inclinable to friendship.

Mr. Day. Nay, good sweet-heart, come, I pray let us be friends.

fr now to be trufted ?

Mr. Day. Nay, good fweet duck, I confess I owe small flart of frailty : fay it were a wench, or fo? Ruth. As I live, he has hit upon't by chance.

Now we shall have sport. [Aside.

Mrs. Day. How, a wench, a wench! Out upon the hypocrite. A wench ! Was not I sufficient ? A wench! I'll be reveng'd, let him be ashamed if he will; call the foldiers, Abel.

Arb. Soft, gentle Abel, or I'll discover you are in bonds; you shall never be releas'd, if you move

Ruth. D'ye hear, Mrs. Day, be not so furious, hold your peace: you may divulge your husband's shame, if you are so simple, and cast him out of authority; nay, and have him try'd for his life: read this. Remember too, I know of your bribery and cheating, and something else: you guess. Be friends, and forgive one another. Here's a letter counterfeited from the king, to bestow preferment upon Mr. Day, if he would turn honest; by which means, I suppose, you cozen'd your brother cheats; in which he was to remember his service to you. I believe 'twas your inditing. You are the committee-man. 'Tis your best way, (nay, never demur) to kis and be friends. Now, if you can contrive hand-

Abel. Yes, but my father biddeth me fend them | fomely to cozen those that cozen all the world, and get thefe gentlemen to come by their effates eafily, Mr. Day. No, not without your opinion, duck ; and without taking the covenant, the old furn of at fince they have but their own, I think, duck, five hundred pounds, that I used to talk of, shall be yours yet.

Mrs. Day. We will endeavour.

Ruth. Come, Mrs. Arbella, pray let's all be friends.

Ruth. Brother Abel, the bird is flown; but you

Abel. I bear my afflictions as I may.

Enter Teague, leading Obadiah in a balter and a Musician.

Tea. What is this now? Who are you? Well, Mrs. Day. How's this! What am I not fit to be are not you Mrs. Tay? Well, I will tell her what trufted now? Have you built your credit and repu- I should say now! Shall I then? I will try if I tation upon my counsel and labours, and am I not cannot laugh too, as I did, or think of the mustard-pot.

Car. No, good Teague, there's no need of thy all to thy wisdom. Good gentlemen, persuade my duck, that we may be all friends.

Car. Hark you, good Gillian Day, be not so ferce upon the husband of thy bosom; 'twas but a will, Look you here, Mrs. Tay, here's your man will. Look you here, Mrs. Tay, here's your man Obadiah, do you fee? he would not let me make him drunk, fo I did take him in this ffring, and I am going to choak him by the throat.

Blunt. Honeft Teague, thy mafter is beholden to thee, in some measure, for his liberty.

Car. Teague, I shall require thy honesty.
Tea. Well, shall I hang him then? It is a rogue now, who wou'd not be drunk for the king. Obad. I do beseech you, gentlemen, let me not be brought unto death.

Tea. You shall be brought to the gallows, you thief o' the world.

Car. No, poor Teague, 'tis enough; we are all friends. Come let him go.

Tea. Are you all friends? Then here, little Obid, take the firing, and go and hang yourfelf.

Car. Thanks, honest Teague, thou shalt flourish in a new livery for the in a new livery for this. Now, Mrs. Annice, I hope you and I may agree about kiffing and compound every way. Now, Mr. Day,

If you will have good luck in every thing, Turn cavalier, and cry, God bless the king. [Exeunt.

and the second of the second of the second the the was the set two 7

CONTRACTOR OF THE TAILOUTE CONTRACTOR OF THE PARTY OF THE

Mary Control of Miles W.

y m 4, and

Paris Commission Commission

A CHILLIAN Y

and the things of religious and of the I have not that of the the least strong and a strong of The for the To or the set of - 4 2 5 0 H 2

Therefore or sixturing our wall of

And a reason of the second of the second

The work of the following the state of the s en les la partir partir de la company de la

Marks who they be the common the

and property and the same

The State of the second of the state of the second of the > to record the bull of the control of The property of the state of th to the state of th and some

MA 55

or a fort of pro more

CAR SALTALE

as held regulations have be seen as the ability are used to a Manager of the Assessment program of a deril man of a defendance.

to the toryography will our consequences of the son. - white web to be a still of to friend a to built will all the and tradems and all THE WHITE STREET

TALKERS